C. C. Wescott Makes Address.

By invitation of the Union Business Men's club, C. C. Wescott, president of the Plattsmouth Chamber of Commerce, was present at their dinner on last Monday and gave an address, in which he congratulated the city on their organization and also of the earnestness with which the club was taking hold of the questions which came before them. He said that we had one of the best states, in as good a county as Nebraska has, and that that the city of Union was as good a town as could be found in eastern Nebraska.

He said that Union was better situated than was Plattsmouth and also congratulated the little city on the fact that she has a wonderful booster in their citizen, W. B. Banning. He called most of the members by name and said he was enjoying a most wonderful dinner, served by the women of the Methodist church of Plattsmouth, which was entered at the Union office as second class mail, but which did not have enough subscribers, and it seemed difficult to get the people about Union interested in the matter.

and cribbed 70 bushels of corn Tuesday, came in and ate a hearty supper and retired, with the rest of the family, about eight o'clock. Brussels—The cabinet of Premier Jaspar resigned Monday evening. It was unable to agree on the linguistic problem of Ghent university over which the liberals and Roman Catholic elements had differed. Henri Jaspar formed a government from a coalition of the Catholic liberal and Christian democratic parties on Nov. 21, 1927. Flemish extremists, allied with the Catholic parties, wanted to have all classes in Ghent university taught in the Flemish tongue, but Flemish liberals wanted to retain certain courses delivered in French.

Uni Magazine Awgwan, Ruled Out by Board

Complaints of Being "Off Color" Lead Sponsors to Withdraw—No Personal Blame

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 25.—The "Awgwan," the University of Nebraska's humorous magazine, was ordered abolished today by the student publication board of the university at a meeting this afternoon, after complaints that the last issue was obscene and colored with sex insinuations.

The board meeting was a closed session, but a student, Prof. H. A. Bradford, chairman of the board, said that the motion to do away with the periodical was taken on the ground "that it serves no useful purpose at the university."

Raymond Murray, of Lincoln, a junior, who is editor of the magazine this year, was called before the board, and made a prepared statement, which was withheld from newspaper men. He took all the responsibility for the magazine, however.

Even Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity, withdrew its backing following appearance of the November issue of the publication last Friday. At a meeting Friday night, it was announced today by Gene Robb, Sigma Delta Chi president, a resolution was adopted to the effect:

"By this resolution Sigma Delta Chi repudiates its apparent official sanction of the publication of the November issue of Awgwan, which by reason of its content of matter far below the standard of ethical principles of our fraternity and profession, we regard as obscene, unwholesome, and not fit to merit our sponsorship."

The publication was founded a quarter century ago, and had been published since except for one year, when financial difficulties and questionable matter had brought a suspension according to Al McIntosh, editor last year.

Lays No Personal Blame.
Prof. Bradford said the meeting had been called to investigate matter of an objectionable moral nature in the issue released Friday. Members of the board declared that the November issue was evidence of a growing degeneration which had been going on for some time. "The present issue has nearly reached the point where further toleration of such a state of affairs is impossible," Bradford said.—World-Herald.

SWEETCORN FOR CANNING

Nebraska produced 10,900 tons of sweet corn for canning this year, says the state and federal division of agricultural statistics. Last year the crop totaled 9,800 tons and two years ago, 11,500 tons.

The average yield was 1.9 tons per acre from a total of 5,740 acres harvested. The production of sweet corn for canning for the United States is 631,800 tons as compared with 415,000 tons two years ago. The average yield was 1.9 tons and the area harvested, 326,040 acres.

The early Christmas shopper can find everything in readiness for their selection of the cards for the season. Order now and have them engraved as you may wish, at the Bates Book & Gift Shop.

COMMISSION IS DISPERSED

Washington—With its task outlined and divided into three principal problems, each to be considered by a subcommittee, President Hoover's public lands commission charged with responsibility of recommending possible return of federal domain to eleven western states dispersed after Monday's session.

Chairman James B. Garfield indicated that the commission would not meet again before January, pending congressional appropriation for its work. The amount of appropriation to be asked was tentatively fixed at $50,000. The three subcommittees will consider disposal and use of public land; disposal and use of subsol minerals, and a national reclamation policy.

Garfield will announce the personnel of the subcommittees later. He presented a summarized statement of many questions by the two first subcommittees. He entered legislative and administrative fields, suggesting a possible recommendation for repeal of the federal water power act and of the homestead act.

WEED ERADICATION TOPIC

A state law compelling the eradication of bad perennial weeds and sharing the expense equally between the state, county and farmer was recommended to a group of Nebraska people at the agricultural college by C. B. Ahlson, formerly an extension service agent in Idaho.

Utah has such a law. Mr. Ahlson says, and it works perfectly. It is directed by the state department of agriculture. The work is done with chemical sprays at considerable expense per acre. The state has appropriated $100,000 to pay its share of the expense. Idaho has a somewhat similar law, excepting that the direction of the work lies with the county officers and the expense is assessed against the land owner.

Farmers in Idaho used to try to hide their weeds, but now they come to the county weed supervisor and ask for help in getting rid of the weeds.

Mr. Ahlson exchanged experiences in using chemicals on weeds with a number of the agricultural college men who have been working on that problem. Every state in the union is concerned with the comparatively new method. Ahlson says. When the results of 1929 work are all summarized there should be some very good information to guide college workers and farmers another year.

Authorities believe sodium or colium chlorate kills the weeds thru their leaves, stems and roots rather than by burning off the tops, as some people supposed. The main roots absorb the chemical more rapidly than the lateral roots hence one spray does not always kill all the weeds. Shoots can come up from the lateral roots and in instances from the main roots.

A rain immediately after the spray is applied seems to help rather than hinder its action. Likewise, putting the spray on in the fall after the green tops are gone seems to get the weeds with one application of the spray.

BLIND COUPLE WITH CHAUFFEUR BEG ALMS

Chicago, Nov. 25.—Frank J. Wagner, 41, and his wife, Ella, 55, who are blind and their private chauffeur Oraton Rice, 48, were each fined $25 and costs here Monday by Judge William Helander on a charge of begging.

Weaver May be Considered for War Sec'y

Nebraska Governor Suggested as One to Succeed the Late Secretary Good of Iowa.

Some talk has been heard in Lincoln during the past week that Gov. Arthur J. Weaver of Nebraska might be considered for appointment in President Hoover's cabinet as secretary of war to succeed the late James W. Good of Iowa, says the Lincoln Star. On the theory that this place should be filled from the middle west, in order to preserve the geographical and political balance of the cabinet, there are many who think the Nebraska executive would be a logical selection to fill it.

The active part that Mr. Weaver has taken for a number of years past in pushing the Missouri river navigation project as an essential part of the national system of inland waterways now in the course of development, and the fact that this program is in the hands of the war department, makes him a rather outstanding figure in connection with the present vacancy at Washington, in the opinion of many Nebraskans.

The governor has also shown his personal interest in co-ordinating plans for flood control in the Mississippi valley with water conservation in the western states through construction of storage reservoirs to hold back part of the flow of streams when they are running full and using the stored water later in the season to irrigate growing crops.

Civilian Usually Named.
While he is not a military man, that circumstance is deemed to be no handicap in considering his availability for secretary of war, since it is customary to name a civilian in that capacity; in fact, it has been a good many years since an army man was called upon to administer the war department. Even during the World war it was in the hands of Newton D. Baker, who never had any service in arms.

Secretary Good, prior to his appointment as head of Uncle Sam's war machine, was a congressman from Iowa. He had the western viewpoint and was committed to the support of inland waterways. Canalization of the Ohio river was recently completed and celebrated with a ceremony at Louisville, Ky., where President Hoover spoke.

Hoover himself, while secretary of commerce in the Coolidge cabinet, was present at Kansas City some years ago at a meeting called in the interest of the Missouri river navigation project, at which he gave it his personal endorsement. Governor Weaver, as president of the association working for that development, afterward spent some time at Washington and, with the help of Secretary Hoover and Congressman Good, succeeded in getting the upper Missouri included as a part of the waterways program. Preliminary work is now being done along the river at different points between Kansas City and Sioux City.

Governor Weaver is not a candidate for appointment as secretary of war, but some of his friends think he is eminently fitted for it and would not be surprised if the president should turn to him as an outstanding westerner when choosing a successor to Good.
