Supreme Court Made Object of Senate Attack

Told in Effect That it Must Change Attitude on Economic Issues—Singles Out Justices

Washington—One of the most outspoken and bitter debates over the supreme court in recent history swept the senate Friday after a warning by Senator Dill, Washington, to the court to change its attitude on economic issues.

The word "revolution" contributed to the tenor of the attack. Senator Dill denied that he had advocated revolution except at the ballot box. Senator Vandenberg, Michigan, defended the judiciary branch of the government—expressions of differences brought back into action the leading actors in the fight over confirmation of Charles Evans Hughes as chief justice.

The Washington democrat opened the debate by condemning the supreme court for its decisions in rate valuation of utilities and for "building up a judicial system of law which is fast bringing economic slavery to the masses of people."

Singles Out Justices.

He put on notice the majority of the court, naming Chief Justice Hughes, Justices Sutherland, Van Devanter, Butler, Sanford and McReynolds, that it is up to them "to say whether the supreme court in the future is going to be in politics."

Replying with vehemence, Vandenberg declared Dill's attack to be "another effort to force the judgment of the legislature branch of our government upon the judiciary."

"When we undertake to say what type of economic and political mind shall go on the supreme court," continued Vandenberg, as he strode forward in the chamber to face the senate, "then we undertake to make the constitution subservient to the transient economic and political issue of the day. When the senate takes on a transient character and it ceases to have its stability then the constitution must go and with it goes its guarantees. When that happens the masses of our people will lose more than they can lose in any intervening crisis on economic or political issues."

Would Amend Constitution.

Senator Brookhart joined in the debate to advocate a constitutional amendment restricting the supreme court from authority to set aside acts of congress. He also advocated the popular election of the judges.

Senator Norris, who led the fight against confirmation of Hughes as chief justice, declared that the supreme court "has been set up on a pedestal and we have made idols of its members."

Denying any personal attack upon Mr. Hughes or members of the court, the Nebraskan said "we have tried to make it plain that the supreme court has been reaching out for more and more power until it has become common knowledge that it is performing legislative duties."

Senator Watson of Indiana, the republican leader, said it was "unfortunate" that Senator Dill had instigated a revolution, but Dill very quickly denied that he had proposed a revolution.

"I suggested the constitutional methods that could be employed and would be employed," replied Dill.—State Journal.

COUZENS BILL IS ATTACKED

Des Moines—The Couzens communication bill pending in congress was attacked Friday by Charles Webster, president of the National Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners, as "virtually usurping the rights of the state in control and regulation of telephone, electric light and transmission lines."

"This bill would take over almost completely the powers of the state to regulate; when we consider that only about 1 per cent of the telephone and 11 per cent of the electric light business is interstate, we can realize the situation in its true light," Webster, a member of the Iowa railway commission, said.

The Couzens bill, Webster said, would regulate rates, supervise the issuance of securities and accounting, and give a federal commission jurisdiction over state rates so far as they affect interstate rates adversely.

BUTLER AGAIN A CANDIDATE

Boston—William M. Butler, former chairman of the national republican committee and United States senator, Friday announced his candidacy for the republican senatorial nomination in the primaries next September. He aspires to the seat now occupied by Senator Gillett, who has made known his intention to retire. Butler, who managed Calvin Coolidge's campaign for the presidency in 1924, said he believed that he should be returned to the senate to build up and protect the business of the state from the competition of the south and west. He also said he was making his plans known at this time, "partly to clarify the political situation."

Jury Frees Boy Who Killed Two in Liquor Row

"Be Good and Forget" Is Advice Upon Acquittal; Prosecutor Says May End the Case.

Grant, Neb., Feb. 14.—A jury of ranchers in district court here tonight found Joy Crow, 15, not guilty of the fatal shooting of Babe Snyder and Axel Johnson. The jurors had the case seven and one-half hours.

Crow, a North Platte schoolboy whom the state had attempted to prove guilty of second degree murder or manslaughter in connection with the fatal shooting of the two men on a lonely road near here, January 29, had retired to his cell for the night an hour before the jury came in with its verdict.

With him was his attorney, Vic Halligan, who successfully pleaded self-defense in the case of the confessed slayer of the two older men. A summons from the courtroom at 9:30 p. m. took the boy sleepy-eyed and half dressed before the bench of District Judge Eldred.

Shakes Hands with Jurors.

He stood, apparently unmoved, as the jury foreman announced the verdict. He then rushed to the jury box and shook hands with each of the 12 who had decided that the state should not hold him accountable for the double killing, which he had readily confessed.

"I'm going back to North Platte and go to school and forget it all," the boy told the jurors. "It's all been a bad dream and I'm going to study hard and amount to something."

The jury admonished him to correct his ways and forgive the incident. May Drop All Charges.

County Attorney Hastings, who had charge of the prosecution, said the jury's verdict meant an almost complete collapse of the state's case against Crow and Paul Duffy, 16, his step-brother who is accused jointly of the killing. He indicated that three cases yet pending against the boys in connection with the crime might be dropped. It had been the plan of the state to try the boys separately for each of the killings—a total of four cases in all.

Returning to his cell, where he will be detained until County Attorney Hastings makes a definite decision in the matter of dropping the remaining cases, Crow embraced his step-brother, who shared his joy.

Following the slaying, the two youths had surrendered and told authorities Crow had shot the two men during an argument over possession of 25 gallons of liquor which the boys had stolen from the two men.—World-Herald.

ILEANA TO WED WITHOUT CAROL

Bucharest, Feb. 14.—Prince Carol, exiled son of Queen Marie and, until his divorce from Princess Helen and his subsequentmorganatic marriage, the heir to the Rumanian throne, will not be permitted to return to Bucharest for the marriage of his sister, Princess Ileana, it was officially announced Friday.

Advices from Paris earlier in the day quoted Carol as saying: "I have request Bucharest for permission to attend Ileana's marriage, but whether it will remain in Rumania afterwards depends on the government's attitude."

PRINCE BEATS PEASANT

Bucharest, Rumania, Feb. 14.—Prince Nicholas of Rumania, member of the regency council, drew the fire of a deputy in parliament for having thrashed a peasant whose cart obstructed the passage of his automobile.

The prince, traveling at a high speed in his automobile, had to slow up on account of a lumbering peasant cart. Impatient at delay, he jumped from the machine and beat the peasant.

Deputy Jowipale called the attention of the lower house to his conduct, but the matter was dropped on the intervention of the speaker.

NOAH BEERY TO HOSPITAL

Los Angeles—Noah Beery, noted character actor of the films, was stricken with acute appendicitis Wednesday while at the breakfast table with his family in his North Hollywood home.

The actor was taken to the Hollywood hospital where preparations were made for an operation.

Upper section shows boys and girls who are patients in the Nebraska Orthopedic Hospital. Lower Section shows two of the buildings of the institution.

There is no object in all the world that attracts so much sympathy as a crippled child. And that explains in a very large measure why the work of reclamation being done at the Nebraska Orthopedic Hospital attracts so much attention and has universal approval as one state institution deserving of generous appropriations of public money.

At this institution, located at Lincoln, such deformities as clubbed feet, such deformities as clubbed feet, and other defects with which children are born, are successfully treated by skillful surgeons and nurses. Deformities due to disease, such as infantile paralysis, tuberculosis of the bone and various bone infections; and deformities due to accidents are also treated.

To the fullest extent within their limited means the members of the state board of control, by whom the hospital is conducted as a state institution, are generous with the purchase of hospital equipment. A very modern and complete operating room with all necessary equipment for orthopedic treatment is maintained. During the course of a year several hundred cases of deformities are treated. The hospital has a capacity of 100 children and there are no vacant beds. There is a large waiting list.

Almost daily children who came to the institution crippled and unfit are discharged either cured or so far advanced in treatment that their ultimate reclamation from deformity is certain.

While the children are undergoing treatment they are also in school. Instruction up to and including the eighth grade is given in the institution. Special teachers from the Lincoln schools give instruction in high school branches to such children as are that far advanced.

Various kinds of handwork is provided to keep the youngsters busy at some easy labor certain periods of the day. Other periods are devoted to entertainment. There is a radio in every ward. Frequent entertainments are provided in the assembly room by Lincoln organizations and by the nurses. A well stocked library entertains and instructs the older children. The training of children under the care of the state while they are undergoing rehabilitation assures parents that their loved little ones are in safe and thoughtful care.

Admission to the hospital is denied to all children whose parents are able to provide treatment for them. But a deformed child whose parents are financially unable to procure treatment for him or her will be promptly admitted from any Nebraska home upon guaranty by parents or the county where the child resides that transportation to and from the hospital will be furnished and clothing provided. After a child reaches the hospital the state of Nebraska is his generous host until his discharge, no matter how long that may be.

The institution is accredited to the class A by the American College of Surgeons. The nursing staff consists of supervising nurses and sixteen student nurses. A modern home is provided for the nurses. A dentist is employed to look after the children's teeth.

In many instances the reclamation of a deformed child is a slow process. He may come to the hospital undernourished or in a run-down condition. He must then be treated in preparation for the surgical correction of his difficulty. And after the surgeon's work has been successfully done the child may have to be kept until he is completely restored to health before he can be sent back to the environment from which he came.

A new building, plans for which are now being drawn, will be erected this year. It is to cost $100,000 and will be constructed on open ground just west of the present main building. It will be a modern structure, much better adapted to the work of the institution than the present hospital which was formerly a children's home and later converted into a hospital by the state.

May Extend Date of Legislative Meet

Governor is Obtaining Details for Calling Elections in Seven Districts.

Gov. Weaver had not reached a conclusion Friday regarding the date of the special legislative session and date of special elections to fill vacancies in seven legislative districts. He has asked Attorney General Sorensen for further information regarding the calling of elections.

Attorney General Sorensen returned from Beemer at noon Friday and had not had an opportunity nor time to formulate the information asked for by the governor.

There is a possibility that the date of the special session may be later than March 5, the date first suggested by the governor. The matters to be included in the call for consideration, outside of banking legislation, have not been announced by the governor.

Attorney General Sorensen had suggested that to safely come within the statutes at least twenty-five days should elapse between the date of the governor's proclamation and the convening of the legislature.

In his second letter to the attorney general, Governor Weaver asks for a copy of a call for special elections, and where and for how long such proclamations should be published. He desires a form notice to the republican and democratic committees in senatorial and representative districts that vacancies exist and the necessity of filling such vacancies.

The governor desires a form for nomination blanks to be used by party committees and an accompanying certificate of nomination and where such certificates are to be filed.

The governor desires further information as to the duties of the secretary of state and county clerks in connection with nominations, ballots and special elections.

County committees may serve in place of senatorial and representative district committees in making nominations or calling party conventions to make nominations, according to a previous opinion of the attorney general.

The vacancies alleged to exist are in the thirteenth and ninth districts in Douglas county; forty-first, comprising Seward county; eighty-first, comprising Dawson county; fifty-second, comprising Butler county; thirty-second senatorial district, comprising Daves, Sheridan, Sioux, Box Butte, Cherry; twenty-eighth senatorial, comprising Phelps, Harlan, Furnas and Gosper counties.

Curtius Opens German Debate on Young Plan

Declares That Nation Must Do Utmost to Meet Terms, Though Burdensome.

Berlin—The new reparations plan is based on the fundamental idea of the mutual interest and co-operation of all the participating nations. Dr. Julius Curtius, Minister of Foreign Affairs, declared in his speech opening the Reichstag debate on the Young plan.

A beginning is being made in co-operation, he declared, by joint mobilization of a part of the reparations obligations, and he believes the Young plan leads to a "considerably improved political, as well as financial situation."

The new plan, moreover, gives a better guarantee of stability of German economies and currency. Dr. Curtius thinks, declaring that nothing better could be achieved by the Germans under present conditions.

Naturally the Government is aware of the burden imposed upon it by the reparations, he said. Nobody could foretell the economic developments of the future, but since the Young plan manifests progress as compared with the past, Germany, in accepting it, Dr. Curtius declared, must do this with a firm determination to fulfill its financial obligation with all its energy and with a sincere effort on its part.

Referring to the German-Polish limitation agreement Dr. Curtius declared that Berlin and Warsaw had settled a dispute which was continually hindering them.

One of the principal outcomes of the acceptance of the Young plan is liberation of the Rhineland, Dr. Curtius pointed out. Occupation, he said, has retarded Franco-German rapprochement and preservation of European peace. With evacuation grave apprehensions entertained by the Reich would be wiped out.

Dr. Curtius did not refrain from pointing to the seriousness of the burden Germany is shouldering and openly stated where the German delegation failed to achieve success. He spoke with much calm and the House listened attentively and quietly.
