FORESTS INSURE WATER

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 23.—The forest comes to the city, says the state college of forestry at Syracuse university, not only in thousands of products made from wood, but in many other ways, "the most obvious of which is the steady flow of pure drinking water."

"Plenty of forests mean industrial life to a large number of manufacturing plants," the college says. "The lack of forests means industrial death to those activities, much idle land which cannot pay taxes and idle hands which cannot earn a living. But taxes have to be paid on idle land and the burden is thrown upon other sources of wealth, and idle hands must be supported by others."

"It is wrong to suppose that only those people who live in the country are interested in forests or are intimately involved in the perpetuation or destruction of forests. While forests may seem remote from Broadway they are nevertheless playing an important part in the everyday life of man."

SUPPORT OF STRIKE URGED

Washington.—The American Federation of Labor Thursday appealed to its affiliated organizations for financial contributions to support the strike of textile mill workers in Danville, Va. Recalling that the national convention of the Federation in Boston recently directed its officers to seek such support, President Green Thursday formally issued an appeal for financial aid, pointing out that a "courageous fight" was being made for the right to belong to a trade union.

"There is much suffering among those who are on strike and their families dependent upon them," Green said. "The wages which they received were very small. The conditions under which they worked were unsatisfactory and the rights which trade-unionists were permitted to exercise were denied them."
