Disposes of 240 Acre Farm for Forty Thousand

George Vogler Purchases Land Holdings of William Wendt Southwest of Louisville

William Wendt sold his 240 acre farm four and one-half miles southwest of town one day last week to his neighbor, George Vogler, for $40,000.

This is one of the finest and most productive farms in that vicinity and Mr. Vogler is receiving the congratulations of his friends on his purchase. Like many of the pioneer farmers, Mr. and Mrs. Wendt have lived to see the day when their children have grown up and one after another married and gone to their own homes, leaving a house much too large for two and more acres than one can tend. Such is the progress of time. For the present season, however, Mr. and Mrs. Wendt will occupy the house and have rented of the new owner a small pasture for a few cows.

Mr. Vogler, the new owner, is one of Center precinct's progressive young farmers who has made farming pay through hard work and close attention to business. He says he never puts all his eggs in one basket. He believes in diversified farming and rotation of crops, and converting his crops into beef and pork in preference to selling it on the market.

With the addition of the Wendt farm Mr. Vogler's holdings now aggregate 500 acres of fertile Cass county land. He has faith in the future of Nebraska farm land and says he believes that farm prices are certain to advance.—Louisville Courier.

Typhoid Cases Show a Gain in Nebraska

Director of Public Health Urges Greater Care Be Taken to Detect Carriers.

Local boards of health are urged to increase their efforts to detect typhoid "carriers." In the monthly report released Friday by Dr. P. H. Bartholomew, director of public health, the report shows that typhoid is becoming more prevalent in Nebraska. Only two cases were reported in February 1930 as compared to five cases in 1931. During January 1930 three cases were reported as compared to six cases during the same month this year.

Doctor Bartholomew issues the following warning in his monthly report: "The unusual seasonal conditions of the past year make an increased prevalence of this disease probable during the current year. Typhoid fever is preventable.

"The number of instances where a previously unknown or undetected 'carrier' has been found to be the source of typhoid fever infection a clear cut indication for the local board of health to exert every effort toward determining the source of infection whenever this disease (typhoid fever) develops within the board's jurisdiction. Only by aggressive, painstaking search and application of well known scientific methods will typhoid be prevented from developing or increasing. Supervision of food handlers is of first importance."

Measles cases reported took a big drop in Nebraska during the first two months of 1931 as compared to the same period in 1930. In February, 1931, only fifteen cases were reported as compared to 2,478 during the same month in 1930. In January, 1930, 1,716 cases were reported as compared to 84 cases in January, 1931.

Chicken pox showed an increase in prevalence. In February, 1931, 328 cases were reported as compared with 259 a year ago the same month. In January, 1931, 340 cases were reported, fell from 71 in February, 1930, to 49 in February, 1931, and from 87 cases in January, 1930, to 38 cases in the same month for 1931.

Measles cases decreased from 25 in February, 1930 to 9 in the same month for 1931, and from 25 in January, 1930 to 6 in January, 1931. Scarlet fever also showed a decrease. In February, 1930, 418 cases were reported and in February, 1931, 212. In January, 1930, 382 cases were reported and in January, 1931, 230 cases. A smaller decrease is seen in the number of small pox cases. In February, 1931, 222 cases were reported and during the same month in the previous year 236 cases. In January, 1930, 324 cases were reported and in January, 1931, 230 cases.

Dr. Bartholomew issued the following statement urging people to engage in a "cleanup" campaign. "The approach of spring directs thought of sanitation. An annual habit—removal of the winter's accumulation of refuse—comes into activity. Civic pride plays an essential and important part in this 'cleanup' process, particularly with reference to thoroughness.

"Local boards of health will prove their value to the respective communities by promotion sanitary improvements of a practical nature."
