F. have also perfected the arrangements for the holding of their district meeting on April 23rd, and which will coincide with the meeting night of the Avoca lodge and as the meeting will be at that place, this will make it very nicely appointed.

Serve Excellent Supper.
The Mothers of the members of the Nehawka band served supper on last Friday at the Methodist church of Nehawka and at which time there was a very large and enthusiastic crowd present. The supper was given for a get together meeting and that the receipts might be used for the benefit of the Nehawka band and who are very enthusiastic in their practice and for the furthering of the interests of the band. Porto Ricans Cheer and Hiss Mr. Hoover Children Serenade the President; Mayor Tells of the Island's Statehood Hope.

Ponce, Porto Rico, March 23.—President Hoover landed here at 7:18 a. m. Monday from the battleship Arizona, which brought him from Norfolk, The Arizona anchored outside Ponce harbor and small boats took the president and his party to the quay, where a tremendous crowd gave him an enthusiastic welcome. There was some hissing as the mayor officially welcomed Mr. Hoover.

Mr. Hoover is the second president of the United States to visit Porto Rico, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, father of the present governor of the island, having preceded him here in 1906.

The president will remain on the island about 35 hours, leaving Tuesday afternoon for the Virgin Islands, the second and final stop on his combination vacation and official trip.

Serenaded by Children.
The city was bedecked with flags, bunting and banners which screamed the word welcome in Spanish, "Bienvenido"—and a large triumphal arch had been erected across the entrance to Abolition park to mark the occasion. The city was enjoying a double holiday, the emancipation fete of Sunday having been carried over.

From Ponce, where Governor Roosevelt and island officials and political leaders met the president, the party traveled in a caravan of 23 automobiles across the island to San Juan, where great throngs welcomed Mr. Hoover at 12:30.

The president went immediately to the governor's palace upon his arrival at San Juan after receiving a salute from the Sixty-fifth regiment.

National guardsmen patrolled the roads from Ponce to San Juan.

School children serenade the cavalcade with songs as it passed through the streets, which were decorated with pennants praising President Hoover's appointments of American officials of the Porto Rican government.

Hope for Statehood.
In his address of welcome, Mayor Emilio Fanguet told his administration had produced more legislation for solving the island's problems than any since the beginning of American sovereignty in Porto Rico. This, he said, had revived hope that Porto Rico, might become a self-governing state in the union.

"This," he said, "would exemplify a Pan-American commonwealth under the Stars and Stripes, where Anglo-Saxon and Latin civilization shall blend together in the furtherance of a common destiny."

President Hoover was given an elaborate embroidered banquet cloth on which had been worked designs of the favorite flowers of all American presidents who have held office since Porto Rico became part of the United States. The poppy, designated by President Hoover as his favorite, was included in the design.

Up to the last minute a small group of Nationalists continued their opposition to the entertainment program. One handbill criticized President Hoover as leader of the national republican party, which it described as "capitalistic, plutocratic, anti-socialist and opposed to the interests of workers."

Lauded by Labor.
The president thanked the mayor briefly for his welcome. He praised the self-reliance of the Porto Rican people and said he hoped that his visit would result in closer co-operation between Porto Rico and the United States.

Labor groups drew up a memorial to be presented him expressing a formal welcome, thanking him for past efforts, personal and national, in Porto Rico's behalf and voicing the hope that his visit will result in better relations between the peoples of Porto Rico and the United States.

Over a new radiophone, President Hoover Sunday talked easily with his family at Asheville, N. C., while the Arizona was far offshore in the Atlantic, nearing the eastern tip of Cuba.

The president chatted with his ill son, Herbert Hoover, Jr., the latter's children, Peggy and Herbert Hoover III, and Mrs. Hoover Jr.

While the president sweated in tropical heat, he learned from his granddaughter:

"It's snowing here; we are going back to Washington tomorrow."

To this the president answered: "That's good, you will be there a week before me."

Governor Theodore Roosevelt and a reception committee arrived from San Juan Sunday evening to greet the president.—Omaha Bee-News.

EXTRA SESSION IS WANTED
Washington—A campaign for an extra session of congress to deal with economic distress was inaugurated at a conference of socialists, representatives of peace societies and other organizations. Conference delegates, headed by Norman Thomas, former socialist candidate for president, conferred with Republican Leader Watson of the senate, and Speaker Longworth to ask them to request President Hoover to call a special session. They agreed to present the request to the president. Watson, however, said he was not convinced that the situation required an extra session.

Delegations also called on Senator Norris and Wheeler, to urge that they and other leaders of the recent progressive conference appeal to the country for an extra session. Senator Wheeler agreed to make a radio appeal, but said he did not think the progressives could influence President Hoover to call congress into session.

GAP WITH RUSSIA WIDENED
Washington—Widening still further the diplomatic gap between the Washington and Moscow governments, the state department has formally forbade its officers to travel in the soviet union on special or diplomatic passports. The ban on the use by diplomats traveling in Russia of other than regular passports such as are issued to citizens has been in effect informally for a number of years. A general instruction has been issued by the department, however, making it a formal policy. Purpose is to prevent any complications arising out of the use in the soviet union of diplomatic passports.

OLDEST NATIVE BORN NEBRASKAN PRIZES HER BELONGINGS
When her home at Decatur was threatened by fire a few days ago, Mrs. Emily Fontanelle, 106 years old, widow of Henry Fontanelle, an Omaha Indian, busied herself rescuing her precious possessions while firemen put out the blaze. The house was only slightly damaged, though fears for its destruction were felt when the fire was discovered.

The home of Emily Fontanelle, built more than 75 years ago, is almost as interesting as its aged occupant. It was built by Fontanelle for his bride. It is of native walnut and set on a foundation of rock. The rock was brought from St. Louis on a barge. She went to this home immediately after her marriage in Bellevue in the early fifties. She is believed to be the oldest living person born in Nebraska. She is half French and half Omaha Indian.

Informed by her son, Eugene, that the house was afire, Mrs. Fontanelle walked calmly through the rooms collecting her prized belongings, most of them accumulated as an Indian maiden at Bellevue. When she completed her dangerous task she walked from the house to find the fire was out.

Henry Fontanelle was also native born. He was a descendant of French nobility on his father's side. His mother was an Indian of the Omaha tribe. He was a native of Sarpy county, but moved to the Omaha reservation in 1855. He was commissioned United States interpreter about 1870. He was also government farmer on the reservation and was appointed chief of the Omaha tribe by the Indian agent. He declined the appointment, desiring to live a quiet home life.

More of a figure in early Nebraska history was Logan Fontanelle, Henry's brother, famed chief of the Omaha tribe. He received his education in St. Louis but in 1840 returned to Bellevue. There he was commissioned United States interpreter until 1853. When negotiations were opened for the transfer of the Omaha Indians to their present reservation, he was elected chief of the tribe and served until his death. His consent overruled poisoning of the child, who died Saturday.

historians. He was honored and respected by the whites.

Logan Fontanelle lost his life while engaged in a buffalo hunt with members of his tribe. The Omahas were suddenly attacked by Sioux. Fontanelle was separated a distance from his men. He was surrounded and killed by an arrow shaft. His body was carried to a high hill overlooking the Missouri and there buried with all tribe honors.

Because of his knowledge of several languages, Logan Fontanelle was a very useful chief of the Omaha tribe. He made several trips to Washington on behalf of his people and was able, by reason of his intelligence, force and ability as a linguist, to skillfully present their cause and secure for them many privileges. His memory is revered among the Omahas by whom he is considered one of the great chiefs. It was by his leadership the Omahas got on so well with the whites and avoided the hostility which the Sioux incurred. The Omahas were not as strong in numbers as the Sioux and Pawnee but Nebraska was their native state and they loved the hill lands bordering the Missouri.
