MONDAY, MARCH 28, 1932.

To the muted music of a stringed orchestra, playing the latest popular dance tunes, 1,000 astounded persons recently witnessed a miracle of plastic surgery at the International Association of Beauty Culturists convention in New York. A "mystery woman," said to have served twenty years in prison for killing her husband, was the subject of the operation. It was explained that the woman, after her release from prison, found it impossible to make a living owing to her being recognized by the deep lines of tragedy which her long prison ordeal had etched upon her face. Under glaring Klieg lights the masked figure of the woman reclined on an operating chair in full view of the huge audience, while Dr. Howard Crum, famous plastic surgeon, destroyed her old face and actually sliced twenty years from her life with his glittering scalpel. The operation took two hours, at the end of which no one in the audience would have recognized the patient as the same haggard figure who had sat down in the chair. The demonstration brings up the alarming possibility of the new surgery being taken up by members of the underworld whose faces have become embarrassingly familiar to the police. In that event the extensive rogues' galleries maintained by the police departments of our big cities will automatically become as obsolete as yesterday's tabloid.
