Britain Prepares to Transfer Gold for Paying Debt

Action Taken as United States Second Note Is Made Public; Delay Refused.

London, Dec. 8.—Arrangements are to be made forthwith for the transfer of gold to the United States to meet Great Britain's mid-December debt installment, well informed quarters said tonight after contents of the American reply to Britain's renewed request for postponement became known.

The chancellor of the exchequer, however, said on his arrival at midnight from Paris, where he participated in the debt conference with Premier Herriot, that the government as a whole had taken no official action but that this would come during the next few days.

Parliamentary lobbies were certain the installment would be paid, and in gold.

Informed quarters said that no doubt existed about the cabinet's decision, which now is only a formality.

The Only Alternative.
Government officials pointed out difficulties which stand in the way of meeting payment by ordinary transfer across exchange counters and said the only alternative, if payment is to be made, is to hand over gold.

The amount of the December 15 item—$95,550,000—is about 30 million pounds at the present rate, but it is only about 19 million pounds in gold coin and bullion.

Parliamentary quarters said that sacrifice of 19 million pounds of gold might necessitate a corresponding increase in note currency which is not backed by gold. The treasury is permitted under the currency and bank notes act of 1928 to increase such currency by order.

Chamberlain Gives Hint.
Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, in an interview tonight gave an indication of what he may recommend to the cabinet.

The chancellor was asked if the French and British statesmen had decided to maintain the Lausanne agreement.

"The Lausanne agreements provided that they should remain intact until ratified or renounced," Mr. Chamberlain replied.

He was then asked if there was any question of renouncing them.

"Not unless a satisfactory agreement is not made with the United States," he replied.—World-Herald.

PRESIDENTS' WIVES CONFER

Washington.—Three president's wives had a chatty time at a meeting of the national committee of volunteer service at Red Cross headquarters. Mrs. Hoover was there for an hour and a half, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. William Howard Taft stayed the session thru. All three are members of the committee.

When Judge Payne, Red Cross chairman, began to read a report on making cotton clothing for the needy, he stopped short and said: "I'm sorry, but I can't read this, ladies; I've forgotten my glasses."

Mrs. Wilson, longtime friend of the judge, smiled and said: "Here, use mine, unless they are too old for you."

Judge Payne did borrow Mrs. Wilson's glasses and thru them read to the group of notable women around the Red Cross table facts on how 150,000 women, organized all over the nation, were making clothes for approximately three and a half million needy families.

Miss Mabel Boardman, committee chairman, told the group that Mrs. Hoover had visited the District of Columbia chapter and had seen the volunteer seamstresses hard at work making cotton print dresses and shirts. "Mrs. Hoover even aided by sitting at a machine herself," said Miss Boardman.

MANY WANT BREWERY JOBS

Omaha.—Omaha brewery officials Friday reported the prospect of beer brewing here has brought long lines of prospective employees to their doors. All of the active breweries are receiving a constant stream of applications for jobs.

One brewery head reported that twenty-five to thirty men daily had been asking for work at the Storz brewery since the beer bill came up in congress. "We're sorry to turn them away," he said, "but our storage spaces are full, and there is nothing that we can do but mark time until legislation opens the way. After that we will employ 200 to 250 men."
