We are hoping this institution will be operating again soon for the best interests of all concerned.

Mob at Salt Lake is Halted by Tear Gas

Fists and Clubs Swing as Fight Waged to Prevent Tax Sale—Led by a Communist.

Salt Lake City.—Clubs, fists and tear gas bombs were wielded in a clash between deputy sheriffs and a throng of several hundred persons who stormed the city-county building in a successful effort to block tax foreclosure sales. The demonstrators separated after being advised by M. P. Dales, their spokesman and communist candidate for governor of Utah at the last election, to meet again Friday at the state capitol.

Meanwhile, all the occupants of city and county offices had been forced by the gas fumes to leave the building. Official business was suspended. "From now on there will be no more unemployed meetings in the building," said Sheriff Young, whose face was cut when a chair was thrown thru a window. "The crowd will be forced to stay outside. We tried to explain to the crowd that no drastic measures would be taken unless necessary and, in that event, arrests would be made and charges of inciting riot brought."

"None of the deputies standing guard at the office when the rush was made was armed with guns. They had only clubs and were instructed to use them only if absolutely necessary. I believe these people understand now that we mean to keep order." Deputy Sheriff Taylor said only one of seven pieces of property offered on foreclosure sale was disposed of before the sale was halted. Those among the crowd who were injured said they were struck by the officers' clubs. Two policemen were slightly injured.—State Journal.

WISE LIKES CABINET

Omaha.—Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York, famous Jewish liberal leader, described President-elect Roosevelt's cabinet, as tentatively announced, as "great." CHARGES BILL ALLOWS CHANGE IN W. O. W.

Lincoln, Feb. 22.—State Auditor W. B. Price Wednesday charged that enactment of the Jackman bill now on general file in the house might permit directors of the Woodmen of the World Fraternal Insurance Co., of Omaha to convert it into a stock company without a vote of the members.

Price opposed passage of a similar measure in 1927 and later helped prosecute a successful lawsuit to prevent the directors from using $1,000,000 of the company's $100,000,000 reserve to establish an old line company. Also he was associated in an attempt, which failed, to prevent sale of the Woodmen of the World building of Omaha.

Bank's Officers Said Protected in the Big Crash

Accused at a Senate Committee Hearing of Feathering Own Nests.

Washington.—An amazed senate investigating committee learned that while the National City bank was selling out its customers in the frenzied days following the market crash of 1929, it set aside $2,400,000 for interest-free loans to protect its own hard pressed officers.

While this was being established by the banking committee Senator Wheeler, on the floor of the senate, scathingly arraigned Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the National City's board of directors, as a result of the latter's testimony that to avoid paying an income tax in 1929 he took a loss of nearly $2,800,000 by selling bank stock to a member of his family, to be repurchased later. "The best way to restore confidence in the banks," Wheeler said, "would be to take these crooked presidents out of the banks and treat them the same as we treated Al Capone when he failed to pay his income tax."

Gordon S. Rentschler, president of the bank, told the committee of the loan fund for the institution's officers. The money was advanced without interest, he said, and sometimes without security as a means of sustaining the morale of the organization.

Under examination, he disclosed that only about 5 percent of the loans have been repaid and that they have been written down and transferred by the bank to its security affiliate, the National City company. Rentschler also described a plan under which employees of the bank were permitted in 1929 to buy its stock at $200 and $220 and acknowledged that, although installment payments have been taken from their salaries since, they still owe more than the shrunken market value of the securities.

Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, questioned whether banking laws had been violated, but Rentschler denied they had. Pecora raised the point particularly when he developed that during the three years ending in 1930, the National City company, borrowing from the bank, sold 1,950,000 shares of the bank stock to the public for 650 millions.

Rentschler denied this was a violation of the law forbidding a national bank to sell its own stock, but said he would not like to see it done again. Presented with evidence by Pecora, Rentschler said employees of the bank assisted in selling the stock, but testified premiums from the sales went to the bank and not the employees.

The witness agreed that salesmen for the security affiliate had gone out to the "highways and byways" looking for customers for the stock when it was selling as high as $580, the its book value was between $60 and $70 and dividends were $4. Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the bank, told of participation by the security affiliate in joint accounts for trading in copper stocks and acknowledged he "wouldn't do it again."—State Journal.

Bryan Wants Party Pledge Carried Out

He Wants Intangibles, Including Money, Taxed as Tangibles—Don't Want Compromise.

Contrary to word received by the senate committee on revenue, Governor Bryan is not satisfied with proposed amendments of that committee which, instead of repealing the intangible tax law, will place another law in its place which will assess money at 4 mills on the dollar instead of 2½ as at present. It will also tax banks the same as at present, 8 mills on the shares of stock, and tax building and loan associations and joint stock land bank organizations as at present, placing all other intangibles in the form of securities on the property tax roll subject to property tax rates.

H. B. Porterfield, secretary to the governor, gave out this statement: "Governor Bryan feels that any compromise on the question of repealing the intangible tax law would fail to carry out the democratic party's platform pledge, and that an act falling short of such outright repeal will not meet the wishes of the people of Nebraska."

"It was made clear, all thru the campaign that the party stood committed to absolute repeal. If the bill is amended along the lines said to have been agreed upon by the committee, the governor believes the effect which the people were led to expect will not be realized."

"Under the intangible tax law the holders of certain kinds of property have escaped part of their taxes and owners of real estate have had to make up the difference. In order to remove this inequality Governor Bryan deems it essential that the legislature shall place all intangibles, including money, on the same basis."

SAYS JURY URGED TO MAKE PROBE INTO BERN DEATH

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 22.—The Examiner said tonight it had learned of proposals by individual members of the county grand jury that the body undertake an inquiry into the cause of death last September of Paul Bern, motion picture producer, husband of Jean Harlow, motion picture star.

Working in secrecy, the newspaper said, two members of the grand jury have conferred with Bern's relatives, seeking statements and exhibits which would conflict with the findings of a coroner's jury that Bern shot himself in the palatial home he occupied with the screen star.

W. W. Windeham, foreman, and O. G. Lawton, member of the criminal complaints department, were named by officials of the district attorney's office as the two jurors interested in the case.

SHOOTING CAUSES A PANIC

Speedwell, Tenn.—Bloodstained pews in the Speedwell academy church gave mute testimony of a shooting which threw a prayer meeting into panic, brought death to one man and serious injury to his brother. Constable Proffitt said the shooting was the outgrowth of ill feeling of long standing.

World Slash in Armament Gets a Further Boost

President-elect Roosevelt Gives His Approval and Asks Continuation of Policy.

Hyde Park, N. Y.—President-elect Roosevelt spread his activity in international affairs to the subject of disarmament and ordered a continuation of the present American policy in the impending Geneva parley. Confering with Norman H. Davis, American representative in the arms and economic negotiations, just before leaving his New York city home, Mr. Roosevelt asked him to continue as acting chairman of the delegation at Geneva. The president-elect emphasized to Davis that he regarded reduction of world armaments one of the most vital matters of the present time.

He remained over several hours in New York to consult with Davis and also to confer with William H. Woodin, announced as the Roosevelt secretary of the treasury. Jesse H. Jones of Texas, the probable new chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, was also at the Woodin parley. Most of his urgent problems, including the selection of his cabinet, were out of the way when Mr. Roosevelt entered the heavily guarded motor caravan that brought him and members of his party to this little hamlet, seventy-five miles up the Hudson river, late in the day from New York.

He withheld, however, announcement of other cabinet officers besides Senator Hull of Tennessee, the secretary of state, and Mr. Woodin. Asked about the cabinet lineup published by the Associated press from Washington, Mr. Roosevelt kept silent.

Discussing the world disarmament problem with newspapers, the president-elect showed a full policy for limitation of the power of offense as the formula for reduction. He said he hoped for early and successful action at Geneva, although no time has been set for resumption of the general conference. He intends that separate action be taken on the arms and economic issues, although he is willing that Mr. Davis proceed also with his work abroad on the economic parley as well as on the arms delegation.

The route of Roosevelt up the Hudson valley today was lined with waving citizens. It was their first glimpse of Roosevelt since the attempt to assassinate him.—State Journal.

FRED BRAMMER LOUISVILLE'S OUTSTANDING BOY SCOUT

Fred Brammer, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Brammer was awarded the American Legion's Medal of Merit for being the outstanding member of the Louisville Boy Scout troop last year, at a meeting of the Louisville post a few days ago. The decision is based on character, Scout knowledge and industry. The entire Scout troop of twenty odd members and their scoutmaster, Rev. R. D. Murphree, attended the Legion meeting as special guests to witness the presentation of the medal.

Following the meeting a luncheon was provided for the members and their guests. Louisville post also donated $5 to the Scouts to be used in further improvement of their Scout cabin a mile west of Louisville not far from the banks of the Platte.

Fred was bunk mate of the two Plattsmouth boys who made the extended southern trip with Louisville Scouts last summer and prior to that time was a guest here for several days at the homes of the local boys, when he met a number of Plattsmouth youths. He is a fine, up-standing lad, reflecting home training and application of Scout principles as instilled in the minds of members of the Louisville troop under tutorage of Rev. Murphree, who is a recognized leader of boys.

AGRICULTURAL LAND LEASING INTRODUCED

Washington, Feb. 22.—The Hoover administration bill for leasing of agricultural lands to get them out of production as a farm relief step was introduced Wednesday by Senator Carey (R.), Wyoming.

It provides for leasing up to a maximum of 50,000,000 acres and would authorize $150,000,000 to carry it into effect.

The government would be repaid through a tax on the commodities made from crops formerly produced on the land.

Everything for the student—from penny leadpencils to typewriters. The place to get them—why, at Bates Book Store, of course.

Denver Pair Held in Auburn Shooting

Suspected of Wounding Watchman Jenkins and of Omaha and Other Robberies.

Auburn, Neb.—Two paroled Colorado convicts were arrested here three hours after they had shot and seriously wounded Night Watchman Fred Jenkins, 50, who had sought to question them. The pair gave their names as James Dublin, 22, and Roy Miller, both of Denver.

Thirty shots were exchanged before Jenkins fell with a wound in his hip. As Night Watchman Mayo Mills went to Jenkins, the pair fled on foot, abandoning a car which Dublin later said was the property of his father. He was captured in town and Miller was found hiding under a bridge one mile east of here.

The men confessed holding up an Omaha pawn shop to obtain their pistols. En route here, they said, they held up a Nebraska City restaurant but obtained no money.

Omaha.—Police announced that James Dublin, arrested near Auburn after he and a companion had shot Night Watchman Fred Jenkins there, answer the description of a "slugger bandit" who has been operating here recently. They added that the description of Dublin's companion at Auburn fits the slugger's companion here.—State Journal.

BORAH DOUBTFUL ROOSEVELT SEEKS DICTATOR POWERS

Washington, Feb. 22.—Senator Borah today wrote M. C. Migel, silk manufacturer of Providence, R. I., that if congress confers "dictatorial" power upon President-elect Roosevelt he would hope and expect Roosevelt "to fling it back in the chattering teeth of a pusillanimous congress with the reminder that he was the president of the United States and not its dictator."

Migel had written the Idaho republican suggesting that he get up courage enough to say to the senate that an emergency exists and propose giving the president "dictatorial powers within the constitution for a certain period."

Replying, Dorah said he was willing to give Roosevelt "full powers enjoyable under the constitution," but he had seen no statement "indicating that the president-elect desired any dictatorial powers."
