Near beer is here and real beer is near here.

It sounds very consoling to say we're living through a period in which history is being made, but it isn't, very.

During the last eighteen months the reading population of London has been increased by almost 1/4 million.
At this rate there will soon be as many readers as writers.

We also believe it is possible to be a loyal patriot and supporter of the new administration without going into ecstasies about Secretary Woodin's musical compositions.

Ivar Kreuger was one of the greatest spenders in history. A recently completed audit of his personal accounts revealed that his living expenses during the last fourteen years of his life averaged $160,000 a week.

A boy in the family always comes in handy when the pie left over is not enough to save.

In writing about Mr. Woodin, head of the treasury, extreme care should be taken to see that the comma after the Woodin is not omitted.

Throw the door wide open, and allow Mr. Wolf to have a good look inside—then, maybe the discouraging inlook will cause him to disappear.

The ticker got three minutes behind in the buying rush on the New York Stock Exchange the other day.
The ticker hasn't been accustomed to running in high gear for about three years.

Senator Murphy, the new member from Iowa, is said to be the designer of the current income tax blank. We are sorry we don't know more about Senator Murphy. He may have his favorable side, also.

If you spend it as you make it, you're a spendthrift and a wastrel; if you save and invest it, you're a sucker.

Because the musical scale is based on the human voice, with its limitations in range and intervals, music uses only about ninety of the 11,000 musical tones that the ear is able to distinguish.

A California professor says, "the only way to prevent cheating is to place each student in a separate room deprived of all his clothing." A cynical Kansas student adds, "Yeah, and give him a bath beforehand, too."

There is not so much need to feel glum about the last election. If you did not get an office in November there is still a chance to get yourself elected a delegate to the prohibition repeal convention. That's something.

Roosevelt as President is nothing short of a boon to evening papers.
A 500-word presidential message can be tucked in even when space is scanty. In discussing a single topic any President should be able to say what he has to say in 500 words.
Roosevelt is doing it.

It's a bit difficult to explain to the youth of the land the classic significance of certain names that now are reappearing in the news, such as Anheuser-Busch, Falstaff, Schlitz, Pabst, etc. It's very much like when one of the children finds a picture of one of your old girls in the back of an old watch.

AT THE "JUNGLE"

In a nook at the edge of a wooded glade
On the banks of the "Old Muddy" near here There's a camp that "tourist" and "bo" have made,
And as shrine to their patron hold dear.

It's revered by the craft as a kind of retreat From the woes and burdens of care;
And in summer or winter his votaries meet
To hold social conclave there.

A brotherhood wide as the limitless land
They are bound to no "civil code"

But an unwritten law governs each of the band In his conduct as "Knight of the Road."

No sovereign to dictate—no creed but their own—They are "monarch of all they survey;"

In "the jungle" they rule from a mossy throne
And carol their glad roundelay.

With a "mulligan stew"—a feast for the gods—A smoke, and a quaff from the spring,
Each knight cites experiences
"riding the rods"
And the joy of a life like a king.

The sessions are open—no guards at the gate—Callers "hall met" all hours of the day—
If you crave recreation, permit me to state
You'll be welcome as flowers in May.

Take a box of "Prince Albert," a package of "fags," And visit that "camp" some day;
You may hobnob with royalty clad in rags—
Or a Wallingford gone to decay.

DIDN'T GO FAR ENOUGH

President Hoover's parting message was that co-operation and not partisanship is the need of the country in these times, but it is a principle, which is effective also when applied between nations. Take the case of the Chinese and Japanese purchasing agents who were ushered into the same waiting room of a British arms factory. Falling naturally into a friendly discussion of the war they proceeded, to discuss the profits which the manufacturer was making from their orders. This led to a joint ultimatum to the factory that the prices be lowered and their united efforts resulted in a 40 percent reduction. It shows what can be accomplished when people resolve to work together in a spirit of friendly co-operation.—Grand Island Independent.

The Chinese and Japanese purchasing agents involved in this incident stopped after they had scarcely begun. They demonstrated what could be accomplished when people resolve to work together in a spirit of friendly co-operation, but they stopped short of accomplishing the most important problem facing the two nations—the establishment of ease between nations.

These two purchasing agents have no authority to handle the problems of their respective nations. But they can go home and tell the home folks what they did by combining their efforts. They can show how the outside world is profiting by the foolish warfare that is being carried on by China and Japan. They can tell how, had they combined efforts, they would have had to pay almost twice as much for the arms purchased. And then they might mention that the whole business is costly, futile and bloody and might be done away with "in a spirit of friendly co-operation." The nationalistic feeling that inspires continued activities is comparable to the partisanship mentioned above. Its elimination and the staying of hostilities would be of profit to both nations. Should China and Japan fight economic enemies in a cooperative battle against nature and ally their forces in a peace time struggle, they would both benefit without anguish and bloodshed.

It is no more necessary that these two nations should be clawing at each other's throats than it is necessary that they should pay two or three prices for their arms and ammunition. By co-operation they defeated the profiteering arms manufacturers. Why cannot they, by cooperation, save lives and property just as they saved themselves money when dealing with a common enemy?
—Lincoln Star.

Betty Compton, when questioned by reporters, said she didn't know whether she was going to marry Jimmy Walker after his divorce or not.
"I haven't seen him since last night," she remarked. The young lady is undoubtedly telling the truth. No girl in these days who hasn't seen her boy friend since last night knows whether she's going to marry him or not, even if she thought she was.

"SEETHING WITH REVOLT"

President Roosevelt is pushing hard to make good his promises to agriculture.

He has accepted as his own, and asked congress to authorize by law, a bold and adventuresome plan for farm relief—and for farm relief not next year but now. It is the plan agreed upon, after long study and much consultation, by the farm leaders themselves and by the experts in farm economics whom Mr. Roosevelt has called to his aid.

This plan involves the trial of "a new and untrod path." But "an unprecedented condition calls for a trial of new means to rescue agriculture." And the new means determined upon after "deep study and joint counsel" offers, the president declares, "great promise of good results."

Considerable opposition, the Associated Press reports, is developing in the senate.

And a Washington report to the Des Moines Register says, of the Roosevelt program as a whole:

"Backed by a massed public opinion he demands dictatorial power to control banking, slash veteran expenditures, rule the railroads, manage agriculture, mobilize the unemployed.

"How long it will be before the frantic legislators, sweating, squirming under the terrific pressure, will bolt remains to be seen.

"The caucus rooms, lobbies, corridors seeth with revolt. It took all the guile, craft, and ingenuity of democratic floor leaders in the house to prevent an open break at the party caucus on the economy bill. . . . Even among the veteran floor leaders there is disaffection.

"In the house, threat of a White house attack cowed the rank and file on the final showdown. Republican support of the president also forced the democratic membership into line. But it was a sullen, reluctant acquiescence, one promising no good for the future."

This is the invariable experience of a new president with a new congress. His influence and control lessen with the passing of each day.
At this time the president's task is made far more difficult than usual because of the extraordinary requests for grants of power he is obliged to make.

Unprecedented conditions, freighted with menaces to the country unless they are dealt with wholly and promptly, justify those requests. And they make it far more important than in other times that the president's leadership be supported.

President Roosevelt needs in congress every ounce of strength, every item of support, he can get, and needs it now. His tremendous task will steadily become more difficult.
The hope of the country hangs on its successful performance. And the president's hope, in congress, hangs on the support of the American people, regardless of party, or class, or section. It is the pressure of "massed public opinion" that alone can insure, on the vital measures that impend, the favorable action of congress.

There never was a time when it was so important as now for every citizen to be adding up the hands of the president of the United States.
And there is no other way to do it so effective as for the voters to keep in touch with their senators and representatives at Washington; to exert to the utmost their proper influence, individual and combined, with the officials they have commissioned to represent them.

With the bill for agricultural relief, of such moment to Nebraska, soon to be acted upon, and with serious opposition already growing, the people of this state should lose not a moment's time in making their voices heard in the halls of congress.— World-Herald.

"The President celebrates his wedding anniversary late." And we suppose a President can get away with it, especially one as busy as Mr.
Roosevelt has been. But ordinary mortals shouldn't attempt any evasions or postponements of that important observance.

Charles Dosticher, the Denver man recently returned from kidnaping adventure, has identified a ranch house near Chamberlain, S. D., as the place where he was held prisoner for sixteen days awaiting arrangement for ransom. The place is said to be an ordinary farm, never having been used as a dude ranch before.

Joan Crawford makes it plain that Doug, Jr.'s alienation suit is not the cause of their separation. Joan hasn't been able to call to mind exactly what the reason was, beyond the certainty that the alienation suit had nothing to do with it. The alienation suit, it seems, was nothing more than one of those mere coincidences which happen so often in the movies.

If your neighbor has a fire loss you will sympathize with him especially if he hasn't sufficient insurance.
But would he have to sympathize with you?

MITCHELL RECORD SOUGHT

New York.—The Sun says a deputy United States marshal has served a subpoena duces tecum on the National City Bank for books and records of the activities of Charles E. Mitchell, who resigned as chairman of the bank. Service of the subpoena was made Friday, the newspaper says, although such action was not disclosed until Saturday.

First point of inquiry by the federal authorities, the newspaper adds, is to be whether Mitchell made a sale or transfer of National City stock to his wife, repurchasing the stock a month later, taking a loss on the sale which enabled him to avoid payment of income tax for the year 1929. United States District Attorney Medalle returned from Washington after a conference with Attorney-General Cummings. Medalle declined comment.

TAX REFUND INQUIRY

Des Moines.—Investigation of alleged irregularities in state gasoline tax refunds amounting to nearly a half million dollars was started by County Attorney Burkman. The prosecutor said the inquiry will involve a number of Iowa road building firms.
