Sun Scorches Grain Belt of the Southwest

Wheat Further Endangered as Kansas Mercury Tops 110 Mark; Ideal for Corn Crop.

Kansas City.—Baking winds from the south sent temperatures soaring above 100 degrees in much of the southwest's wheat belt. Abnormal spring readings up to at Pratt, Kas., prompted federal and state departments of agriculture to forecast further wheat crop damage unless relief comes prior to the imminent invasion of harvesters into the fields of prematurely golden grain. Conversely the high temperatures were described as ideal for growing corn.

At Topeka, where the mercury went to 100, federal and state agencies reported prevailing hot winds would cause poor filling of wheat if they continued. Drouth, dust storms and other factors already had reduced the Kansas wheat crop expectation of 58,856,000 bushels, less than one-fourth of the state's record harvest of 1931.

Heat records for this date were broken and the all-time high for the month of June were in danger of being surpassed. Official readings included 110 at Wellington and Arkansas City, Kas., 108 at Salina, Kas., 106 at Winfield, Kas., and Enid, Okl., 105 at Wichita, Kas., 97 at Coffeyville, Kas., and 96 at Kansas City and Oklahoma City.

HAVE INTERESTING GAME

From Wednesday's Daily
Last evening a team known as the Sandpitters played a four inning battle with a group of some of the Red Sox and other players, the short battle resulting in a 6 to 4 victory for the Sandpitters, darkness finally causing the close of the game. The last inning was played in the growing twilight that made it difficult for the batters and the fielders to see. Dick March did the hurling for the Sandpitters while Harry Newman was on the mound for the pickup team. The game was hurriedly organized but despite that fact there was a very large number present to witness the game.

Robert Ren, who is attending St. Benedict's college and Faustine Nowacek, who is a student at Mauer Hill prep school, are here from Atchison, Kansas, for the summer vacation.
