How About Old Settlers?
Shall Union celebrate the time-honored occasion, or will it be allowed to pass unnoticed? For over forty years the old residents of this vicinity as well as the many who have formerly resided here have gathered together for their annual visit and gala day, and have found it a most pleasant occasion, providing for renewing of friendships. True it has cost a bit of money but with each recurrence of the celebration there has been much good accrue to the town of Union and it has gone down in history as the oldest continuous annual event in Nebraska.
Should it be the sense of the people that this day be observed again

Prehistoric Finds in State Being Revealed

Dr. G. H. Gilmore of Murray, Left Today for St. Helena, Cedar Co., to Assist in Work.

Dr. G. H. Gilmore, who in recent years has been greatly interested in the development of the prehistoric findings in Nebraska, departed today for St. Helena, in Cedar county, where some valuable findings have been made in the uncovering of a village of the ancient Indians or residents of Nebraska in the ages long gone.

The findings in Cedar county are most valuable and reveal a whole village of ruins and from which many valuable relics and finds of the ancient races can be derived. Dr. Gilmore was assisting the state workers in the uncovering of several mounds and house sites in Cass county in the last several years and has been invited to participate in the Cedar county explorations into the ancient ruins.

Dr. Gilmore reports that the findings at St. Helena have been very valuable as to the development closely connected with the life of the ancients that might have once inhabited Nebraska.

Many of the finds that have been revealed in Cass county have added much to the lore of ancient life in the great plains country of the west and from all of the various explorations will be woven in the future a wonderful history of the early Nebraskans and inhabitants of this part of the west.

Hybrid Corn Yields Best in the State

Foundation Seed Can Be Obtained from Experiment Stations—Difference of 18 Per Cent

Nebraska farmers are told in an announcement made from the Nebraska college of agriculture that hybrid corn has outyielded the best varieties of corn consistently in Nebraska in special tests during the past few years.

It is not expected, however, that farmers will develop inbreds for the production of hybrid seed corn. Most of this will be done at experimental stations which will supply interested corn growers with foundation seed. This consists of two single crosses from which can be produced the hybrid seed. A number of farmers thruout the state are following the latter practice this summer.

As an average for five years during which time nineteen different tests were conducted, the five best hybrids yielded on the average seventy-eight bushels per acre compared to sixty-six bushels for the five best varieties. This represented a difference of 18 percent.

Agronomists at the college of agriculture says that good hybrids, in addition to making a higher yield, also may be expected to have a more uniform height of ear, to produce fewer sucker and barren stalks and to lodge less than ordinary varieties.

Corn grown from hybrid seed by ordinary field pollination should not be used for planting regardless of how fine it may look, the agronomists say. Its yielding ability will be greatly below that of the ordinary hybrid seed and probably even lower than the ordinary good variety. It is necessary, they say to produce the hybrid seed each year by controlled crossing or else use old seed.

Bride Reveals Success-Secret to Her Friends

"I'm going to give you a tip from experience," she explained, "and I hope it saves you the heart aches I've been thru. After we were married for about a month, I noticed that John's appetite was gone. He would pretend to eat, but I could see he wasn't hungry. Then, someone told me that he was eating down town before coming home. Naturally, I was heart broken. I knew my cooking wasn't so good, but thought it was simply lack of experience.

"Fortunately, my neighbor came in while I was still crying, and I told her my difficulties. She immediately called her grocer to send me a sack of VICTOR FLOUR. Then she put me to work making biscuits and angel food cake. I used my old recipe, but you should have seen the difference! When John came home, I could see he regretted that hasty sandwich down town. Now, his appetite has miraculously recovered, and I'm taking no chances on his 'losing it' again. I'm a convert to VICTOR FLOUR and haven't had one failure since using it.

Victor Flour is manufactured by The Crete Mills, Crete, Nebraska, one of Nebraska's oldest and largest milling companies. You can buy it at all Better Grocers in Plattsmouth.

In the rotogravure section of the Kansas City Star of Sunday, there appeared a picture that has much interest to the residents of this city as a historic picture of the past. This was a picture of the waterfront of Plattsmouth in the sixties and showing the pioneer store of Thomas K. Hanna, whose widow, the owner of the picture, died a few days ago at the age of 97.

The picture shows the log cabin house of the Hanna family as well as the store building, which like all the structures of that day was constructed of cottonwood. The vicinity of the house and store was filled with covered wagons and large number of oxen resting until they took up the task of hauling wagons west to Denver and the Rocky mountain sections. At the time the picture was made the Missouri river was flowing in the Nebraska side and the business section of the city was on Second street where the Burlington freight house, coal sheds and the ice plant are now located. To the present day resident the only familiar landmark is the bluff where the Burlington bridge now has its Nebraska terminus.

L. B. Gorthey and family of Murdoch were guests for the day and dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Jones where they all enjoyed the day on last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Pool were over to Lincoln on last Tuesday where they went to visit an uncle of Mr. Pool who has just undergone an operation at the hospital of that place.

Mesdames Nora Jourgeson, Herman Hillman and Amy Fry, the latter who is visiting here from her home in Illinois, were over to Omaha to visit Mrs. Jennie Reed on last Saturday.

Anton Jourgeson was looking after some business matters in Omaha and Plattsmouth on Monday of this week and reports a wonderful crop of growing corn all the way from Weeping Water to Plattsmouth and on to Omaha.

Frank Taylor and wife of near Alvo, were visiting in Weeping Water and as well looking after some business. While here they were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rehmeier and other relatives and friends.

Mesdames A. R. Dowler, Ray Smith and Ernest Hennings made up a party of matrons of Weeping Water who were over to Plattsmouth on last Tuesday afternoon where they were doing some shopping at the George L. Farley Furniture company of that place.

James Boardman and family who have been making their home in the building between Spencer J. Marshall's shoe store and the blacksmith shop of John E. Johnson, recently removed to Manley where he will conduct a soft drink and amusement parlor.

N. W. Moore who was sent here from Council Bluffs some time ago to assist at the Handy filling station to work in co-operation with Wm. Van Every early this week moved his household goods here and are now occupying the residence property of Mrs. Hammond.

W. W. Davis, the veteran carpenter and builder has just completed making some repairs on the building used for a tinshop north of Main street and which is used by Strathboye the tinner. Mr. Davis will occupy the upper floor for a carpenter shop, he having heretofore been on lower Main street.

Mr. Albert Olive, a brother of George Olive, making his home in California has been visiting at the home of his brother in Weeping Water for the past week. On last Tuesday afternoon Messrs George Olive and son, Ben, and his brother, Albert, drove over to Lincoln where they were looking after some business for the store and as well were visiting the new state building.

Visited at Rock Bluffs.

A number of the young men of Weeping Water visited the hills of old Rock Bluffs on last Sunday, taking their dinner and remaining all day. Among those there were Walter Rasmussen, Russell Van Every, Marvin Kivett, Howard Rasmussen. They searched for arrow heads and spear points as well as stone knives and hatchets. They enjoyed the trip very much and secured a lot of Indian relics.

A Contingency Is Here.

It might be that many might not recognize the animal when they see him, but just the same the elevator at Weeping Water has become filled with wheat, corn and oats, with some bins not entirely filled with the respective grain which is placed therein, and last Saturday a few loads of grain had to stand on the streets until such changes were made that the loads might be taken. Again the same contingency occurred when there was more grain offered than could be handled. However they soon arranged for receiving the grain as fast as it comes to the elevator.

Mrs. Jennie Reed Very Poorly

Mrs. Ike Reed who has been in very poor health for some time past was taken to Omaha last week where she entered the University hospital where she underwent an operation for relief, as she had been suffering very severely. When the incision was made it was observed that she was afflicted with a fibroid tumor which required much skill and a good deal of time to remove. The greater portion was removed in an hour and forty minutes and the patient was getting so weak the remainder of the operation was deferred until later. The patient has been so severely ill since that it was thought best not to attempt the removal of the remainder of the tumor until she regains her strength. Oxygen is being administered through a tube passing through the nose and throat. Many of her friends from Weeping Water were over to Omaha to visit the patient who is still very poorly. Among those visiting her Saturday were Mrs. N. L. Grubbs and daughter, Maxine, Mayme Hillman, Mrs. Herman Hillman, and Mrs. Reed's daughter, Lenore.

CALLED ON SAD MISSION

From Tuesday's Daily
This morning the funeral party bearing the body of Delmar Fry of Denver, passed through this city en route to Grinnell, Iowa, where the boy is to be buried. The party was joined here by Miss Edna Fry, who has been the nurse at the Hawksworth home for the past five years, she being a niece of the dead boy. Miss Fry went on to Grinnell for the services. The deceased was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Fry of Denver.
