SMOKES WITH ROOSEVELT

Hyde Park, N. Y. — President Roosevelt was asked for a light by one of the carefree boys of the civilian conservation camp on Bear Mountain as he stopped there for a chat with the youths. The unidentified boy first saw Robert Clark, secret service man, standing by the presidential car, light up. He asked for a smoke.

Getting one, he calmly turned to Mr. Roosevelt, who was smoking and asked him for a light. Laughing, the president flicked his cigarette and handed it to the boy who puffed a light from it. "Okay," said the president.
