Before shooting Hasik at a dance for which the mayor and his son George, 15, played in the orchestra, Dolezal slipped a note into young Hasik's pocket which said the elder Hasik was shot because he allowed his son to smoke and play for dances.

How to Produce Less Milk and Bigger Profit

Permanent Pastures and Less Grain Feeding Is Recommended by Experts.

It is possible for the individual dairy farmer to produce fewer gallons of milk and still make more money, whether a nation wide control program is put into effect or not, according to the federal bureau of dairy industry. Improvement in the general level of dairy prices resulting from nation wide curtailment should, however, provide additional returns.

Observations of dairy farming methods in many areas, together with results of feeding experiments, have convinced the bureau that "many farmers would find it advantageous to change their system of farming to one in which they would keep most of their land in permanent pastures and legumes, and feed very little, if any, grain. The pastures and other roughage would be the basal ration, and grain would be fed only when the resulting increase in production could be obtained at a profit.

When prices for milk and buttermilk are low, more dependence would be put on the roughage ration, with a lower but more profitable production.

"Farming and feeding according to this system," the bureau says, "would contribute to the dairy farmer's income in three ways: It would enable him to produce milk at the lowest cost; it would reduce the quantity of milk going to an already overloaded market; and it would tend to stabilize the industry by reducing fluctuations in supply and in price."

The farming and feeding system suggested by the bureau is based on the results of actual feeding experiments in which dairy cows were fed on three different kinds of rations, a full grain ration, or 1 pound of grain to 3 pounds of milk produced; a half grain ration, or 1 pound of grain to 6 pounds of milk produced; and a ration consisting of roughage only. Cows fed roughage only produced 70 percent as much milk as when they were fed a full grain ration, and when fed a half grain ration they produced 93 percent as much as they produced on the full grain ration.
