REAL NEBRASKA APPLES

Attorney A. L. Tidd of this city when not engaged in the pursuit of the legal profession, in his relaxation hours, makes a specialty of the raising of fine flowers and fruits. He has some splendid specimens of both at his place, but none surpassing his apples. Mr. Tidd has some delicious apple trees that he planted a number of years ago and which are now bearing a fine crop of this fruit. He brought a large number of these apples to the Journal and they equal in every way the celebrated apples of Oregon and Washington, or in fact any other part of the nation.

SHOW EXCELLENT WORK

The manner in which the police force of the city and their special traffic officers, handled the large number visiting the business section of the city the past week, is to be commended. The regular force were on duty almost twenty-four hours a day during the four days of the festival. The chief of police was on a part of the night shift while the night officers were on from noon until the next morning. With hundreds of cars and thousands of pedestrians on the street all of the time, there was not an accident reported, which is truly a fine record.

Allotment Drive is Nearly at an End

Nebraska Now Has 75 Percent of Wheat Acreage Pledged to Curtailment.

With the signing of the last applications for wheat allotment contracts Monday night, 400 Nebraska farmers and the county agents and emergency agricultural assistants will have completed the first part of the greatest agricultural organization program Nebraska has experienced. W. H. Browaw, state wheat administrator, said Saturday afternoon.

That the 400 farmers and their agents have done a thoro job is shown by the fact that more than 50 percent of all wheat growers of the census list have signed up approximately 75 percent of the wheat acreage of the state. In other words, a big majority of the growers with any appreciable acreage since 1930 have entered into the "triple A" wheat adjustment plan.

An accurate check up is called for by the wheat section in Washington Tuesday morning of next week, Brokaw said. He expected the last of the reports from the counties in the Thursday morning mail next week. If farmers keep the county officers busy all day Monday the check up can not start until some time Tuesday, he explained.

The 400 farmers who have helped with the preliminary educational program since last July virtually have volunteered their services on their respective county committees, the state administrator pointed out. In every case these men have been more interested in putting the job across than in their own particular wheat allotment money.

Asked about the wheat growers who are staying out of the wheat plan and putting in more wheat than ever, Brokaw's men at the agricultural college said these growers are taking long chances on getting a satisfactory price next harvest. They do not recognize that there is enough wheat stored in bins in the country now to last until the harvest of 1935, even if the next crop is as poor as the 1933 crop has been. This big surplus of wheat will tend to keep the open market price down because this country has little or no export outlet for its wheat.

An inflation program of the federal administration might put the dollar value of wheat up above present levels, but the prices of things the farmer buys would also go up and a bushel of wheat might buy no more goods than it has in the past, the economists say. Growers who sign the wheat contracts are guaranteed a parity price on 54 percent of their wheat, regardless of what happens to money standards.

The contract which follows the application is for two crop years, Brokaw's men emphasized. The wheat grower will finish his contract with the harvest of the wheat crop in 1935. Even if the government should want to continue with a wheat adjustment program, the man who signs a contract this fall is in no way obligated to continue with another contract after 1935.

Only one important interpretation so far as Nebraska is concerned is still pending in Washington, Brokaw said. That interpretation deals with the large holder of land. Under the ruling which stands at the present time, a contract signer agrees not to increase wheat on any other land not under contract. If a large holder of land should have one farm in a series on which the crop rotation system provided for an increase of wheat in 1934, that landholder would be jeopardizing his contracts on other land by following his rotation plan. Tenants on all his farms might be affected by what one of them did. Likewise, a landlord might be affected by what one of his tenants did on land rented from another party.

These rulings have not seemed fair to Nebraska administrators, and at a conference at Omaha a few days ago with Kansas, Iowa, and Missouri men, the request was sent to Washington for a change. To date no official approval has come out from the wheat section at Washington the proposed change.

Beginning this week, the permanent elected county wheat production control associations will take charge of the "triple A" plan in Nebraska counties. These associations are made up of the men who signed applications for contracts. They are all local men living in the neighborhoods they represent. Common sense, honesty and fair play will govern their actions in handling the business of the association, Brokaw feels. They will be given considerable leeway in handling the affairs of the wheat plan in their county, being re-

Bible School Lesson Study!

Sunday, October 1 By L. Neitzel, Murdock, Neb.

"Saul in Tarsus" Acts 21:39; 22:3, 27, 28; 26:4-7; Phil. 3:3-6.

These scripture passages introduce to us the man that introduced Christianity to the world—Saul of Tarsus. We study today the life of this "chosen vessel" who "turned the world upside down." (Acts 17:6.)

The material for this lesson is so vast that we must use some system and adhere to it, that we may not get out of bounds; so we will consider Saul's preparation for his life work:

I—Saul's Childhood. (Acts 21:39). Born in the year 1 A. D. in Tarsus in Cilicia, a Roman province. His father was a Roman citizen. As far as known, there was only one girl, beside Saul, in the family. (Acts 23:16). Tarsus was a very prominent city. On its coins were the inscription, "Self-governing metropolis." It had a university supplied by home talent teachers; it vied with Alexandria and Athens. Saul attended the synagogue school, 6 or 7 A. D., then becomes a tent maker 13-14, A. D. and went to the rabbinical college in Jerusalem, 15 A. D. His well-to-do father could afford to send the boy to college. In this way the boy became well versed in Jewish law and tradition. His sister may have come with him to Jerusalem, where she got married, had a family and probably took care of the lad in school.

II—Saul's Training in Jerusalem. (Acts 22:3, 27, 28). In Gamaliel's theological school (Gamaliel being a grandson of the famous Hillel) Saul sat at his feet, literally, as the teacher sat on an elevated platform and the pupils on the floor before him. God had a design in this child, as seen in Gal. 1:15, where Saul tells us that "It pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace, to reveal his Son in me." The future apostle to the Gentiles received the very best of training. God looks far ahead to have workmen ready when he needs them. Gamaliel was liberal-minded, large-hearted, tolerant, as seen by his speech recorded in Acts 5:35-39. (Please read!) Saul did not get the calm and tolerant spirit that was in his teacher; but the knowledge of the law, a thorough knowledge of the scriptures and of the current method of interpretation. How minute and extensive that knowledge was, every Epistle he wrote bears witness. He quotes from all parts of the scriptures. Hebrew and Greek translation were known by him. He lacked nothing in education to make him the peer in debate, as he showed in his defense before Festus and King Agrippa; none could withstand the wisdom and the logic and the power when he spoke. He was eminently fitted to carry his message "before Gentiles and Kings and the children of Israel." (Acts 9:15). All the other apostles were "unlearned and ignorant men" (Acts 4:13), but when the Gospel was to be introduced into the centers of learning it required a different type of man, but he was ready, to hand; fully equipped to carry the torch that should enlighten them "that sit in darkness." (Acts 26:18). This pioneer in the church of Jesus Christ blazed a trail through the then known world; all the great centers of population and learning were visited and the standard of the cross raised up.

III—Saul the Pharisee and Persecutor. (Acts 26:4-7 and Phil. 3:3-6). Here he gives us a glimpse of his inner life, as he reveals it before Agrippa II, a great grandson of Herod the great. This man knew Jewish law and custom; he could understand Saul, whose life had been lived in Jerusalem, was known to all the scribes and leaders. He belonged to the strictest sect of the Jews—the Pharisees. The name is connected with double dealing, double-faced hypocrisy; but to them we owe the purity of the scriptures; they watched that in translations that every "i" was dotted and every "t" crossed. The best we can say for that sect is that they had a firm belief in a coming Messiah and believed in the resurrection of the body. They were the separatists, the Puritans of their day.

Though a Pharisee, Saul was the best of the Pharisees. "Now I stand here—a convict in chains. Because he entertained the hope of the promise which God made to the patriarchs and to David.

The twelve tribes of Israel looked for this promise. It seems strange that a man should be persecuted for a faith they all had in common—all but the Sadducees. Now Saul shows us how he observed all the precepts and ordinances of the law, but that was all outer ceremony, typifying the spiritual in the service to God. Circumcision must be of the heart. "Circumcise yourselves to the Lord and take away the foreskins of your heart." (Jer. 4:4). The worship of God is a spiritual act, ceremonies are only outward acts. "God is a spirit; and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." (John 4:24).

The Christian glories in Christ Jesus. The Jews gloried in strict adherence to customs and rites laid down by Moses. Saul has no confidence in flesh, but in the atonement for sin accomplished by Christ on the cross.

Saul's zeal for his church was known to all; how he persecuted the disciples of Jesus is a dark page in his life. But, thanks be to God! the fact that the most bitter enemy of Christianity should become its most powerful advocate has always been one of the strongest of Christian evidences. This is one of Saul's most inspiring summaries of his belief and his life. The great progress of Saul's development we study next week.
