Why Children Need a Liquid Laxative

The temporary relief children get from some synthetic, habit-forming cathartic may cause bowel strain, and even set-up irritation in the kidneys. A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to give the child "a double dose" a day or two later.

Can constipation be corrected in children? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say many mothers who have followed this sensible medical advice: 1. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Give the dose you find suited to the system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until the bowels are moving regularly without aid.

An approved liquid laxative (one that is widely used for children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The mild laxative action of this excellent preparation is the best form of help for children—and grown-ups, too. The dose can be regulated for any age or need.

DENIES FEDERAL CONTROL
Chicago.—Col. Robert McCormick, editor and publisher and chairman of the committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' association on freedom of the press, said that under the first amendment to the constitution the press, in his opinion, could not be compelled to accept special government control. Colonel McCormick referred to the NRA code proposed by the government for the press, and explained that newspaper publishers had signified a willingness to sign the code as the government drew it, with the single addition of a clause guaranteeing freedom of the press. This he said, the government will not agree to, while newspapers, almost unanimously, are insisting on its inclusion.

Morgenthau Has a Man to Liking as Tax Adviser

Displaces Harold Groves by Naming University of Columbia Expert, Roswell Magill.

Washington.—With a word of praise for two high governmental fiscal officers who are in disagreement with the administration on monetary policy, Acting Secretary Morgenthau left to discuss the progress of the currency program with President Roosevelt at Warm Springs. At his daily press conference, just before leaving, he expressed a high regard for Lewis Douglas, director of the budget, and Eugene R. Black, governor of the federal reserve board, both monetary conservatives, and an expectation of working side by side with them thru the vital months ahead.

In addition he announced the appointment of Roswell Magill, of Columbia university, as the treasury's tax adviser. He will replace Harold M. Groves of the University of Wisconsin, who, appointed a short while before Morgenthau took charge of the treasury, was unable, the acting secretary said, to meet the civil service requirements. He explained he wanted a man of his own choosing for the post and said Magill was generally regarded as one of the country's outstanding authorities on taxation. He added that Groves also had attained a high reputation in this field as a member of the Wisconsin legislature and the state's tax commission. Morgenthau said that under a new arrangement that had been worked out regarding the source of Magill's salary it would be unnecessary for him to take the civil service examination. His salary is to come, it was intimated, from a special fund appropriated by congress to meet expenses incident to the banking crisis of last spring.

The acting secretary said the salaries of his assistant and publicity director, Herbert Gaston, and three officials brought into the department this week to divide the duties ordinarily assigned to the undersecretary were to come from the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation. This brought an immediate protest from Walter J. Cummings, chairman of the corporation, who disclaimed the men were on his payroll. Gaston a little later announced that their salaries were coming from the special appropriation. The men in question are Earle Balle, in charge of fiscal affairs; William M. McReynolds, given authority over matters of personal administration and departmental budget, and Herman Oliphant, general counsel to the acting secretary.

Morgenthau would have nothing to say regarding a resolution adopted this week by the federal advisory council, an auxiliary of the federal reserve system, opposing the administration's monetary program. He said he had heard of it only as gossip. Walter R. Frew, chairman of the Corn Exchange Bank and Trust company and representative of the New York district on the council, disclosed that the council had taken a stand against a currency of fluctuating value, and said that monetary uncertainty had affected the economic structure of the nation adversely.—World-Herald.

TELEOLOGY

The wind that sweeps across the plain,
And whirls the sand and seed and grain,
Rocklessly scattering them into the air,
Is a symbol of the Power that deals to the militant fair.

The three toed horse that grew his hoof,
Was not from his ancestors' ancient roof,
But forced with a necessary running speed,
He out-stripped the "Ice Age" that made him a steed.

The light from Arcturus that dashes keen,
Has little to do with sprouting a beam,
Though touching with skill a sensitized plate,
Opened the Century of Progress which is considered very great.

When you look at a kettle boiling on ice,
You wonder who has paid the price,
And also made a steel ingot burn,
As freely as a motor makes the wheels to turn.

The clock's shrill clatter may be heard afar,
While the tassel of corn tosses its head in the spar,
And pollenizes the stem of the new born ear,
And makes a kernel to grow perfectly clear.

The days of the year are drawing to a close,
As the rattle of the corn and pumpkins arose,
To that sublime height that put them on the spot,
And saved a goodly heritage in keeping with the lot.

The muses seemed ready their harmony to blend,
With the musical lyre that the chords of heaven extend,
Although Bruno's philosophy was discordant to the friar,
Until he was consumed by the inquisitor's fire.

When the rays of light begin the day,
And a sun-beam falls across our way,
To brighten a rough, rugged path just trod,
Seems an eternal emancipation from the correcting rod.

CUBANS MAKE DEBT STUDY

Havana.—The Cuban foreign debt was a matter of concern for the Grau San Martin government—the first day during which there was no shooting in the capital since last week's rebellion. President Grau conferred with Havana officials of the Chase bank. A government spokesman said debt matters were discussed.

Finance Minister Despagne said before the conference that he did not know whether "we can pay the December installment on the exterior debt, but many things can happen before December." At army headquarters it was said that the interior situation had quieted considerably after rebel movements in Oriente, Camaguey, and Santa Clara provinces and that "most of rebel bands have dispersed."

"Mystery Is Deepened — Every Angle of the Wynekoop Murder Baffles the Police." A police department 100 per cent baffled, and consequently with no prejudices to overcome or false notions to disprove, ought to get results pretty soon.

Dr. Wynekoop Confesses

This remarkable photograph of Dr. Alice Lyndsay Wynekoop, famous Chicago woman physician, was taken shortly before she confessed Friday to the slaying of her daughter-in-law, Rhetta Wynekoop, whose body was found on an operating table in the basement office of the Wynekoop home in Chicago Tuesday.

Financier Advances Stabilization Program

Frank A. Vanderlip Opposes Both Inflation and Gold Basis of Former Times.

New York.—Frank A. Vanderlip, financier, outlined a plan for stabilizing the dollar without reverting to the gold standard of the post-war period. Vanderlip, expressing opposition to unrestricted currency inflation as well as to the gold standard as it previously existed, said, however, he did believe "in the definite attachment to gold of our currency, so far as ability to settle foreign trade balances in gold is concerned."

He expressed the opinion his plan "would return us to the gold standard and would stop the exaggerated gyrations of the foreign exchange market, and give legitimate exporters and importers a solid basis upon which to calculate." Also, he said: "It would prevent gold hoarding. It would prevent our monetary base from augmentation or depletion without regard to any proper elements of the monetary problem, which amounts to the most vicious tinkering with our currency by foreign forces."

As outlined in a statement released thru the committee for the nation, Vanderlip's plan follows:

- First: Permanently cease the coinage of gold.
- Second: Convert all existing gold coin into bullion.
- Third: Confine the convertibility of the stabilized dollar to exchangeability for gold bars only, with a minimum weight equal to approximately $5,000 in the new currency.

Fourth: Prohibit the federal reserve banks from receiving deposits from foreign central banks and compel all member banks currently to inform the federal reserve banks regarding the total of foreign controlled deposits in member banks.

Fifth: Retain the present government control of all foreign exchange transactions. Specifically define that control as meaning that gold will only be freely supplied for setting legitimate foreign trade balances. Shipments of gold moved in response to international finance bills or the purchase or sale of securities or merely by the will of frightened owners of timid capital should be controlled by government.

WANTS PLAN RECONSIDERED

Washington.—Senator Norris indicated he planned to ask the public works administration to reconsider its unfavorable decision on the North Loup power-irrigation project. It was rejected, he said, on the ground there was insufficient demand for its power and that its irrigation would bring new land under cultivation.

White Norris has declined to protest decisions of the PWA, he said he would call attention to the real demand for power in that area and the fact that all land to be irrigated under the project already is under cultivation. E. H. Dummit, engineer for the $2,905,000 project, said it was "not defeated by any means."

The uncle of William C. Bullitt, the new ambassador to Russia, violently disapproves recognition of that un-Christian government and condemns his nephew's connection with the whole procedure. Fortunately for the new ambassador his irate relative is not a rich uncle, but merely a reverend uncle.
