Hog Program is of Interest to State Farmers

Much Slaughtering Is Expected to Be Done at Home Since Penalty Is Waived.

Reports from outstate indicate increasing interest on the part of farmers in the federal corn-hog program. Payment of benefits to wheat growers is causing interest to pick up in the corn-hog situation. Information indicates that more than $400,000 has already been distributed to growers in eight states under the wheat program.

In the case of the corn-hog program, however, farmers in Nebraska have been expressing the opinion that home slaughtering of hogs will increase materially soon. Under the provisions of the adjustment program, a farmer may kill his own hogs for home consumption without paying the processing tax, which is to be $2 per 100 pounds by February. Those who cannot do their own butchering may hire it done without paying the tax.

Persons who slaughter hogs and deliver the meat directly to the consumers will pay the required tax to the internal revenue collector within thirty days. After that time, failure to pay puts the individual in the same class as the income tax dodger, who commits felony punishable by a fine and federal imprisonment.

In anticipation of the home slaughtering increase, Director Brokaw of the agricultural extension service has called the attention of the county agents and emergency agricultural assistants in Nebraska to extension circular 228, which farmers have found useful in past years in slaughtering. Prof. William J. Loeffel is the author and the bulletin is distributed free thru the college of agriculture.

READY FOR PLAY

Final preparations are being completed for the presentation of "Spooks," the three-act mystery play which the Junior class will offer as its annual dramatic production at the high school auditorium, Monday night, December 8.

The ticket sales, sponsored by members of the class, will get under way next week. Prices of admission will be 25c and 35c, with no seats reserved. The cast has been working hard on the difficult scenes of this mystery thriller, and Mr. Figley expects to have them ready for the opening curtain by Friday.

A mystery play is always enthralling, and those who anticipate having a few thrills, and having cold chills sent up and down their spine, will not be disappointed in "Spooks." From the time the first word is spoken until the curtain, you will be kept busy guessing the outcome.

The play is so cleverly contrived and so startling in its developments, that it is hard to keep from screaming out loud. It is impossible to figure what is going to happen next. However, the excitement is relieved at frequent intervals by the injunction of splendid comedy.

But the entire play is surrounded with an atmosphere of mystery and uncanniness. Out of the blackest darkness, intensive and faint lighting of the ghostly scene, comes the sharp slam of a door, along with a piercing shriek. These are instances which will make you hang tight to your chair.

"Spooks" brings to the Plattsmouth high school stage one of the finest mystery plays of the last few seasons, and it is hoped that a packed auditorium will greet the efforts of the cast.

The average monthly compensation for the 225 allowed cases is $35, total being about $7,900. All veterans with claims had the privilege of appearing before the board in person or by representative to present additional evidence and explain their claims.

The board was composed of G. E. Price of Lincoln, chairman; Frank A. Taylor of St. Paul, R. D. Flory of Albion, Dr. A. J. Weirick of the medical staff of the veterans administration, and M. M. Travis of the rating board of the veterans administration at Des Moines.

Body of Brooke Hart is Found

The frightfully mutilated body of Brooke Hart, slain San Jose, Calif., kidnap victim, found Sunday a few hours before a mob of infuriated Californians lynched the two self-confessed merciless murderers of this young man. The body was discovered by two duck hunters, floating in shallow waters one mile south of the San Mateo-Alameda bridge. Man-eating sharks and giant crabs that infest the waters of the lower bay had eaten away the hands and feet of the youthful victim and identification was only possible by means of a pearl-handled penknife in the trouser pockets of the skeleton. This graphic picture taken by Central Press Association, shows the dismembered body of young Hart, his skeleton covered with a blanket. In the background can be seen the point on the bridge where the young Santa Clara graduate was clubbed to near death and his still living body tossed to final destruction. Gazing at the body are, left to right: Coroner Grant D. Miller of Alameda county and the deputy coroner, both of whom declared the victim had been murdered. The skull had been crushed in. On the extreme right is Harold E. Stephens who, with Leonard Dalve, discovered the body in the bay and who will claim the $500 reward posted by Alex J. Hart, father of the dead youth. Note the absence of the boy's left foot, snapped off by sharks, while the right foot has been eaten away. From the waistline up nothing is left of the body but a skeleton.
