A Good Woman Dies

Oline Marie Neilson was born on August 1, 1887, in Denmark, and came to America in 1901, having been married to Andrew Christensen. They made their home near Alvo for many years, and to them several children were born, among them Marion Christensen, of Alvo; Mrs. W. M. Blum, of South Bend; Mrs. Carl Hoffman, of Alvo; Miss Lucille Christensen, of Alvo; Miss Gertrude Christensen, of Alvo; and Claire Christensen of Lincoln. The husband and father passed away in 1917. Mrs. Christensen was united in marriage to Peter Johnson in 1922, and to this union one son was born, Norman Johnson. Mrs. Johnson had been in poor health for some time and was taken to the hospital in Lincoln where she suffered a stroke Sunday night, passing away a few days later. ## Alvo Doing CWA Work

The village of Alvo, in order to provide employment for its idle men, has secured two grants of federal CWA funds to be used in street and sidewalk improvement and work at the cemetery, that should put the town in spick and span condition. The work was started last Friday, as soon as possible after approval of the projects by the state CWA board at Lincoln. The registering of men for work is in the hands of Mayor Arthur Dinges, with cards issued by the county re-employment office. Supervision of the work to be done is in the hands of Joseph Armstrong, who will also act as timekeeper. There will be two crews, each working 20 hours per week, and employment thus provided will be divided as equitably as possible among men who are out of work, with preference given men with dependents and those who otherwise would be on the charity roll. It is a masterful stroke to get money into the hands of the forgotten man as quickly as possible and yet not partake of the dole, that has so many obnoxious features. It will also enable towns and villages to get much work done that they could not otherwise afford to pay for.

The amount allotted for labor here under the grants already approved is slightly over $800.

Red Cross Roll Call

The Red Cross roll call for Alvo, which has been underway since Armistice day, now numbers twenty members, which is about the same as last year, but far below the number who belonged in the early years after the World war.

Delivery of Corn Goes On

The delivery of corn goes on at the Miller Cereal company cribs here and one crib three hundred feet in length has been nearly filled. Everything is in readiness for the starting of another crib in which to store the vast quantity of grain this concern is buying up.

Every printing job given to an out-of-town concern helps hold down Plattsmouth payrolls, which are expanded almost 100 per cent in Plattsmouth.

Can Apply Soon for Trees to Transplant

Seedlings for Farm Use May Also Be Asked Early in Month of December.

Clayton Watkins, extension forester at the agricultural college, says application blanks for governmental seedling and transplant trees will be in the hands of county extension agents throughout the state not later than Dec. 15.

Disposition of the Clarke-McNary stock of both broadleaf and evergreen trees will take the same form as in other years, says Watkins. Farmers will be able to apply for the trees thru their county extension agents. A charge for shipping and handling charges will again be made.

A total of 915,000 broadleaf and evergreen trees are ready for distribution. The former have been purchased thru the Nebraska Nurserymen's association and are in storage at York, Beatrice, Fremont and Arlington. In all 575,000 broadleaf trees will be distributed next spring.

Survival of trees planted by farmers last spring for windbreak and woodlot purposes over the state varies considerably, according to Watkins. Although spring moisture conditions were favorable for good growth, the hot dry weather in June killed many seedling and transplants.

"Without doubt there will be another great need for planting trees next spring," Watkins declares. "Last year we witnessed the cutting down of millions of trees for fuel purposes. Wood piles were popular throughout the entire state. The same thing will probably be practiced thru necessity this winter. This makes it all the more important for trees to be planted to replace those cut down."

In Nebraska the Clarke-McNary reforestation project has been running for eight years and over five million trees have been planted by farmers in co-operative project.

Anderson Wins Fight for His Wheat Figures

Nebraskan Says Result to Bring Added Profit of $84,807—Corn Loan Blanks Sent Out.

Washington.—A. E. Anderson, Nebraska crop statistician, said Nebraska farmers would receive $84,807 additional wheat benefit payments as a result of a conference with farm adjustment officials in which he gained acceptance of his wheat production and acreage figures.

Anderson's records, he explained, showed production and acreage slightly in excess of official reports which were being used in computing benefit payments. Downward adjustments, however, will be made in acreage statistics for Furnas, Deuel, Banner and Kimball counties. In all other counties, Anderson's figures will be used in computing benefit payments. Meanwhile, checks for nearly $120,000 were mailed Nebraska farmers for reducing wheat production.

Anderson explained the discrepancy between his figures and the official estimates was slight—less than 1 percent in production and 2.6 percent in acreage. "Now that this question is settled, the administration can approve payments to several large wheat-producing counties which have been held up," Anderson said.

He said 20,000 corn loan blanks had been sent the Nebraska railway commission to permit immediate granting of loans on corn, properly warehouse and sealed. He said the loans of 45 cents a bushel could be made in all counties, and that 500 loan blanks had been mailed to each county agent. While he was informed loans could not be made on corn in flooded state cribs, Anderson said he would press the matter further. He contended the semi-humid climate in Nebraska prevented deterioration even the crib facilities were below standard.

VET RETIRES WITH MEDAL

San Francisco, Nov. 30.—Master Sergeant Louis Clinton Mosher, his Congressional medal of honor pinned to his breast, retired from the United States army here Thursday.

A cavalry veteran, Sergeant Mosher is one of the two enlisted men on the active rolls of the army to hold the Congressional medal—highest decoration given by the United States government.

Twenty years ago, while the Moros' Mauzers cracked defiance during the bitter five-day fight at Bugsak mountain in the Philippines, Sergeant Mosher risked his life "beyond the call of duty."

He dashed through bullets to bring back a wounded comrade who had fallen in front of the Moro trenches. General John J. Pershing, then governor of the Mindanao province, in which the fighting occurred, recommended the coveted medal be awarded.

Death Decreed Third Time for Scottsboro Man

Verdict Returned as Jury Is Sworn for Second Trial—Crowd Held Without Demonstration.

Decatur, Ala., Dec. 1.—The third verdict of death was returned today against Heywood Patterson, 21, Negro, one of seven defendants in the "Scottsboro case," for an alleged attack of a white woman who was hobnobbing on a freight train.

In a courtroom so quiet the sound of men breathing could be heard, Walter Green, clerk of the court, read the verdict. "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty as charged, and fix his punishment at death."

The Negro, who twice before has heard identical words read in his case, appeared unmoved.

No Demonstration.

He was tried on an indictment charging an attack on Mrs. Victoria Price, aboard a Southern freight train on March 25, 1931.

There was not the slightest sign of a demonstration and the spectators waited until the jury, which was discharged by Judge Callahan immediately, had filed from the courtroom. Judge Callahan was preparing to swear in a jury, just selected for the trial of Clarence Norris, second of the defendants to be called on charges of attacking Mrs. Price, a Huntsville mill worker, when the Patterson jury came in.

Two Defendants in Court.

Patterson had been brought from the jail, surrounded by six deputy sheriffs and sat watching intently as the new jury was sworn. Norris seated beside him, also showed interest. Both were removed from the courtroom, after the verdict was read, before the crowd was permitted to move.

Samuel S. Leibowitz of New York, chief counsel retained by the International Labor Defense in behalf of the Negroes, asked when Judge Callahan would pass sentence and announced he would file a motion for a new trial which, if denied, would be a step toward the United States supreme court.

Nebraska's Projects Due to be Set Aside

State Already Has Received More Than was Provided in the Tentative Quota.

Washington.—Prospects for immediate approval of large Nebraska public works projects appeared slimmer with reports the state had already received allocations which exceeded by some 35 percent the amount understood to have been set tentatively as Nebraska's quota.

Certain prominent Nebraskans said public works officials had informed them the state's share was estimated roughly at $22,000,000, and that projects already approved call for nearly $30,000,000. The latter sum was reported to include near $8,000,000 allotted Nebraska originally for public works highway projects.

No formal announcement of state public works quotas has been made but it was understood the administration agreed tentatively to distribute the 2.3 billions among the states on the basis of unemployment and population—the former taken as 25 percent and the latter as 75 percent in computing apportionments.

Nebraskans who received that information concluded the public works administration would hesitate to approve additional large projects until congress apportioned additional funds for public works. They did not infer, however, that smaller projects would be rejected arbitrarily or that large projects were definitely pigeon-holed.

Earlier in the week, proponents of the $44,000,000 Tricounty Power and Irrigation project said they hoped to establish the desirability of their proposal so conclusively that it would be approved in spite of the diminishing fund. Backers of the North Loup Power and Irrigation project expressed similar determination.

COMMODITY PRICES FALL

Washington.—Wholesale commodity prices declined approximately 1 percent during the week ended Nov. 25. The labor department announced the wholesale index for the week was 71 as compared to 71.7 for the week ended Nov. 18, the recession taking prices back toward the level Nov. 4 when the index was 70.9.

No better town in which to reside than Plattsmouth.

Dr. M. U. Thomas, of Weeping Water was called and dressed the wound, finding it necessary to take eight stitches to close the gaping wound. The little fellow endured the pain of the injury and the sewing of the wound without a murmur, only saying to the doctor, "Why, you said there would only have to be a few stitches." The hand is getting on nicely now.

Plans to Put America A-Wing

With plans for construction of 6,000 new airports throughout the nation included in the Public Works re-employment program, Eugene Vidal, director of aeronautics at the Department of Commerce, recently announced a plan, the goal of which is production of 10,000 low-priced airplanes by next Spring to make use of the new airports. To this end he has sent questionnaires to 34,000 flying enthusiasts in an effort to determine the extent of the market for planes to cost $700 or less. The result of this survey will be made available to the aviation industry, and manufacturers, assured of a market for their product, can turn out the low-priced craft. The present so-called "dive" plane" sells for less than $2,000, but mass production would probably lower its cost.
