

Currency Fight Predicted when Congress Meets

Senator Reed, Pennsylvania, Says That President Has Power to Forestall Debasement.

Washington. — Predicting a currency battle when congress meets, Senator Reed, Pennsylvania, said there were not enough votes to "stop the tendency toward further inflation or to force the president to use the power given him in the last session unless he himself were to oppose it. If he were to take a stand against currency debasement I think we could muster enough votes to stop it," Reed told reporters.

He expressed the opinion the president had made "four mistakes" in dealing with the monetary situation. "First," he said, "he used his influence in favor of the Thomas amendment when I think he should have opposed it, and I think the country would be in much better condition if this amendment had been defeated. Second, he made a lot of us feel very badly when he repudiated the gold clause in government securities, or asked congress to do so. I think this was a dishonorable thing for the government to do, and that it will do irreparable injury to the national credit. Third, he adopted this policy — Professor Warren's policy — of buying gold above the world market. That policy seems to have failed. Fourth, he adopted the policy of buying and coining newly mined silver. This looks like a concession to the silver bloc, and may be intended to forestall demands for further inflation. I do not think that it will do so, but if it should have that effect it will probably be worth all it costs."

Reed said there had not been any real inflation yet in any sense. It is not too late for the president to put down his foot and say "no, we won't do it," he said. "If he were to do that, there would be an outburst of confidence such as we have not seen in the United States since the depression settled down. Business has improved here to some extent, but not so much as it has in Great Britain and some other parts of the world. I think the whole world has been on the mend for ten months. Our banking troubles, first, and our currency troubles, second, have held us back. If we can get these straightened out so that our people can count on something definite it will enable us to keep step with the rest of the world."

Reed said he had found that President Roosevelt was "personally very popular, but that this popularity does not extend to some of his policies." Reed said he had found the "proceeding taxes of the AAA are resented by both the farmer and the consumer in Pennsylvania."

PLATTSMOUTH PRODUCE FARMERS CO-OP. CREAMY. d28-2sw

President Roosevelt's official family has made 127 radio "appearances" since March 4. The one with the least experience on the air is Vice-President Garner, who seems somehow to lack that indefinite something to sell himself to a sponsor. He has not faced a microphone since the day he was inaugurated.

ROTARY CLUB HOLDS MEETING

The Rotary club at their meeting on Tuesday afternoon was disappointed in the fact that L. H. Puls, head of the department of public speaking at Creighton university, was unable to be with them for a talk along the line of his chosen work.

Dr. H. G. McClusky was in charge of the program and afforded a fine substitution in a discussion of problems in business ethics and which was ably presented and enjoyed to the utmost by all of the club membership.

The club had the pleasure also of a short talk from James Robertson and Henry Kaffenberger, high school boys who have been members of Rotary for the month of December.

The regular songs were under the leadership of Searl S. Davis.

The club had as a guest Robert Rea, son of F. I. Rea, former prexy, who is home for the holidays from the St. Benedict's college at Atchison, Kansas.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to take this means of expressing our deepest appreciation of the many acts of kindness shown us at the time of the death of our husband and father and also for the words of sympathy in our loss. We also wish to thank those taking part in the funeral services and all who assisted in any way in making easier our burden.—Mrs. A. H. Engelke-meier and Family. d&w

WOLF HUNT

There will be a wolf hunt held in the vicinity of Nehawka, Sunday, December 31st. Hunters meet at O street road one mile south of Nehawka by 10 a. m.

OBITUARY

Jack Orin Tyler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Tyler, was born January 8, 1894, at Plattsmouth, Nebraska, he removed to Omaha when nineteen years of age and had lived there ever since. He was not married and made his home for the greater part of the time with his sister, Mrs. J. Foley of Omaha. There are left to mourn his death two sisters, Mrs. Foley and Mrs. Clara Line of Los Angeles as well as one brother, N. J. Tyler of Hollywood, California.

Burial was held Tuesday afternoon at the Oak Hill cemetery here following services at the John A. Gentleman mortuary at Omaha.

Will for Peace Can End War, Declares Hull

Co-Operative Spirit of Nations Found in Parley at Montevideo—Sums Up Work.

New York.—The message of Montevideo to the world is that a will for peace can end war by national agreement, Secretary of State Hull said. The leader of the North American delegation said he believed the Pan-American conference ended Tuesday with a record of "the greatest accomplishment since independence days"—the development of a complete co-operative spirit of unity providing "a foundation for wholehearted and forward-moving action in the future."

Hull spoke from Montevideo. "Just now," he said, "the thoughts of every person are riveted upon Bolivia and Paraguay. All who love humanity are hanging breathlessly upon every word that wings its way from the capitals of these two nations. They are hoping and praying that the two fine peoples who have been so long in a death grapple will now be able to meet the supreme test of civilization by entering upon a lasting peace."

Hull said that "if there were moments when the attitude of the United States was like one of granite" it was in the cause of peace. "We have been good neighbors," he said. "We have just shown we have been good neighbors, and good neighbors we shall remain. Pan-American solidarity is no idle term in the light of events here." Hull summed up the work of the conference as successful only because of the "magnificent co-operation here where we have been working together without undue quibbling and have recognized the opportunity for vaster accomplishments ahead of us."

IN SERIOUS CONDITION

The friends of the Sam A. Moyer family here will regret to learn that the son, Jack A. Moyer, is in very serious condition at the Robert W. Long hospital at Indianapolis, Indiana. The young man has been sick for a long time suffering from a peculiar blood disease that seemingly has baffled the attending physicians and the lad has undergone many blood transfusions but without any success in building up his strength. He was at the hospital at Evansville, Indiana, the home of the family for many months and was finally taken to the Indianapolis hospital in hope of giving him relief. The young lad has borne his long illness cheerfully and would be pleased to hear from the school friends here.

HOLD CANDLELIGHT SERVICE

One of the impressive features of the Christmas services at the First Methodist church was the candlelight vesper service, held at the church on Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The Christmas story was presented by an angel, this role being taken by Miss Bernice Arn, who gave the scripture story of the Nativity, while the story was pantomimed by the children of the Sunday school, carrying to the audience the story.

The choir of the church gave the musical setting of the service that was filled with beauty and at the close of the service the candles were lit and added a touch of unusual impressiveness to the scene.

Certified Seed Grows in Favor in Nebraska

Many Hybrids Are Grown—Wilt Resistant Alfalfa Developed in Dawson.

Nebraska farmers are certifying more and more seed each year, the summary of extension work in agronomy in the state for the year ending Dec. 1, indicates. P. H. Stewart, extension agronomist at the college of agriculture, says extension agronomists gave assistance to the Nebraska Crop Growers association in certifying 32,900 bushels of seed on farms of forty-five growers in twenty-six counties.

Stewart says nineteen corn variety and hybrid demonstrations were carried on in eighteen different counties during the current year. Once again they showed the wide difference in yielding ability of different lots of corn. Important differences were noted also in the ability of corn to stand up well and resist drought. As a result of these tests such varieties of corn as Krug, Biermann, Wahlgren and Roggenbach have yielded the highest and are being tried by farmers in comparison with their own corn.

Hybrid corns have also been used in the tests this year. They have consistently outyielded open pollinated varieties, Stewart declares. This year they averaged 62.1 bushels per acre in the test against 54.1 bushels for all varieties. The five best hybrids averaged 67.3 bushels and the five best other varieties 57.3 bushels. In the six years that hybrids have been used, they have averaged 67.3 bushels per acre against an average of 61.1 bushels for all other varieties. As a direct result of the demonstration work, thirty-two Nebraska farmers produced one or more acres of Nebraska 238 hybrid in 1933. This is the first time it has been produced on Nebraska farms altho a number of farmers have been planting commercial hybrid seed.

Hardistan alfalfa is another crop which is proving popular with farmers. Extension and experiment station workers discovered a few years ago that in Dawson county it maintained its stand and productiveness while many other fields killed out rapidly due to alfalfa wilt. Station tests later demonstrated that this variety has extraordinary value as a wilt-resistant alfalfa. It was given the name of Hardistan. Now there are thirty-four Nebraska farmers growing approximately 255 acres of it. Considerable surplus seed is now available thru the certified seed list of the Nebraska Crop Growers association for other farmers who need a wilt resistant alfalfa.

NO CLUE IN ABANDONED CAR

State Sheriff Encres Monday night said hopes to connect an automobile abandoned between Battle Creek and Tilden with the $1,500 robbery of the First National bank of Syracuse had faded, and interest again has turned to a hunt for Clarence Eno. The automobile, which bore no license plates, was left at the roadside early Saturday morning. A trucker told Norfolk authorities of seeing the car on the highway, apparently stalled and with three men working with it. Three men robbed the Syracuse bank.

The trucker said he got out to help the men, but they fled. At Norfolk he reported the incident to police, and deputy state sheriffs went to the spot and found the car. There was nothing found in it or on it, Encres said, to indicate ownership.

Encres said he thought the machine "had too much mileage" to be the one used in the robbery. He said soon after the holdup he was searching for Eno, and Sheriff Ryder of Otoe county said "about a dozen" witnesses of the robbery had identified a photograph of Eno as one of the gunmen.

SUFFER FROM THE COLD

From Tuesday's Daily
Last evening two young men arrived in the city, en route to Creston, Iowa, they being almost frozen from the intense cold of the ride in a box car from Denver east. The men were given shelter by the police at the city jail and the frost bitten hands and feet thawed out and the men able to continue their journey this morning to the east, but still feeling the effects of the experience with the zero weather.
