seeking to make the town a most desirable place to live, succeeding very well in the undertaking. But it has gone a step further in the matter of being dry. So much so, that the citizens have had to secure a tank and haul water to place in their wells and cisterns for the use of the home.

Speedy Restoration of Airmail Service

Administration May Act to Restore Airmail to Private Planes Without Waiting for Congress.

Washington.—The possibility arose that the administration might do something about returning airmail to private planes without waiting for congress to say how this should be accomplished. President Roosevelt surveyed the entire airmail situation at a conference with officials of the postoffice and commerce departments and Attorney General Cummings. As he left the white house Cummings told reporters there was a possibility of action by the government before enactment of permanent airmail legislation. He said this was not certain, however.

Hearings have been concluded by senate and house committees on the administration bill outlining a permanent basis for mail flying by private lines. The measure now is up for study by the committees, with a number of changes in prospect.

Another proposal for permanent airmail legislation has been advanced by Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), which would authorize the postmaster general to put mail sacks back in private planes under a system similar to the railway mail set-up. Whatever plan wins congressional favor, the postoffice department is understood to insist that companies obtaining future contracts be divorced from holding companies and interlocking directorates.

Efforts are being made to conclude action on temporary legislation permitting the postoffice department to compensate the war department or carrying of the mail. Air corps officials Thursday said officers and men flying the army mail planes along present skeleton routes were not receiving the full $5 a day allowances that would be available when his temporary bill becomes law.

After President Roosevelt's conference with Attorney General Cummings, Secretary Roper and Harlike Branch, assistant postmaster general, it was indicated that the administration intends to adhere to the general policy laid down after contract cancellation. In effect this policy called for a reorganization of the private companies that formerly flew mail before they would be eligible again for awards.

The house postoffice committee, in revising the administration bill, has eliminated a section which would prevent private lines that formerly carried the mail from participating in future awards should they press cancellation claims against the government. Another section, which would bar any company from an award should it have any connection through ownership or officers with a holding company, another company having a mail contract, or airplane manufacturing companies, was modified.

FACTOR HEARING POSTPONED

Chicago.—Judge Sullivan in United States district court postponed to April 3 the hearing on a plea to dissolve the writ of habeas corpus under which John Factor is free.

Factor, wanted by the British government on a charge of receiving money he knew to be fraudulently obtained, is under $50,000 bail on his writ, having lost his fight against extradition. The continuance was based on an assurance by Adeler J. Teit, attorney for the British crown, that Great Britain had agreed to a two week delay.

Nebraska Gets Five New CCC Locations

Knox Garden, Johnson and Otoe Counties and National Forest Near Halsey.

Omaha.—Iowa gains eight new CCC projects and Nebraska five in a re-shuffle announced at the seventh corps area headquarters for the period from April 1 to Sept. 30. Nebraska's quota will remain the same, 2,750 "Juniors" and 275 veterans; for Iowa, 5,000 and 500 respectively. Officials estimated that approximately 40 percent of these quotas will be open for enrollment of new men, with 60 percent of the present personnel re-enlisting.

The Nebraska camps will be located in Knox Garden, Johnson and Otoe counties and at the Nebraska national forest near Halsey. The present project at Valentine is being retained. It was announced that Nebraska headquarters are to be transferred April 1 to Fort Crook near Omaha, and Fort Robinson. Five Nebraska CCC companies will remain on projects within the state and two companies which have been serving on the west coast will be brought home. Six Nebraska companies will remain on the Pacific coast and two companies will serve in other states.

OMAHAN FATALLY WOUNDED

Omaha.—William Brocker, 46, of Omaha, was found fatally wounded in a bedroom at his home Thursday night. A shotgun, with one shell discharged, was found on the oor near him. He died in a hospital a short time later without having been able to tell police what had happened.

William, jr., a son, told police that the gun may have been accidentally discharged while his father was cleaning it. The son said the elder Brocker had been in ill health but had never complained or appeared despondent. A daughter, Alvina, said her father was sitting in his room reading his Bible when she called him for supper. He replied he would be down in a few minutes, she said. While the family awaited him, they heard a shot in his room. The charge struck Brocker in the left side near the heart. His wife, eight sons and two daughters survive.

Supreme Court Upholds Labor Pact in Decision

Sustains Seniority Rights in Case of Rentschler vs. Missouri Pacific Appealed from Cass Co.

The Nebraska supreme court in a decision released Friday sustained the rights of individual union laborers under collective agreements between unions and employers. This is the first time that state supreme court has passed on the rights of parties under a collective agreement.

The court affirmed a one thousand-dollar judgment in Cass county for Adam S. Rentschler of Louisville, against the Missouri Pacific Railroad company. He asked damages on the ground he had been let out of work while a laborer with lesser seniority rights was retained and was awarded damages on the basis of wages lost by failure to retain him in employment in preference to the other man. Judge W. B. Rose dissented.

Binding Contract.
The supreme court said collective labor agreements or trade agreements are terms used to describe bargaining agreements as to wages and conditions of work entered into between groups of employes usually organized and groups of employers or corporations. Such a collective agreement, it said, becomes a binding contract when it is made a part of the individual contract of each employe, and a breach of its terms gives rise to a cause of action by either party.

The court also ruled that the terms of the collective agreement as included in an individual labor contract ought not to be construed narrowly and technically, but broadly, so as to accomplish its evident aims to protect both the employer and employe.

Jury's Finding Undisturbed.
Findings of the trial court that the collective agreement between the railroad and Rentschler's union included provision for retaining men on the basis of seniority if capable of handling the job were approved. The court said conflicting evidence as to Rentschler's ability to handle the job to which he would have been assigned had been retained was a matter of fact determined by the jury whose findings would not be disturbed.

The court held the employe is not deprived of the right to appeal to the courts because his contract of employment provided a method of arbitration of disputes.

CWA BOSSES ARE BLAMED

Omaha.—John Raab, of Omaha, one of three CWA workers arrested Friday after he and two other workers were alleged to have prevented others from going back to work on a project after the noon hour, said at police headquarters that "the whole trouble was too many bosses."

He denied there had been any violence or any threats of violence. The others arrested with Raab were John Circo and Sam Piccolo, both of Omaha. Frank Armstrong, general foreman on CWA projects, said the whole trouble was traceable to "demotion" early Friday of Raab who had been a "straw boss." Armstrong said all "straw bosses" were demoted because there was no longer any need for them. CWA and city street department officials said the men led by the three arrested had armed themselves with bricks and had threatened to hurl them at any man going back to work.

Raab blamed the trouble on what he termed as "conflicting orders" from various persons. He said he protested the conditions and "then a city foreman came around and said I was fired." Raab said he challenged the foreman's right to fire him and that the two men arrested with him were "standing by me in my challenge."

ADMITS SLAYING OF WOMAN

Pottsville, Pa.—By the flickering light of an oil lamp in a farm house window, Albert Shinsky, mountain youth, re-enacted the slaying of Mrs. Susan Mummy, 63, after he told County Detective Buono that he shot the woman to break a "hex" she put on him eight years ago. She called a spirit from the sky, he said nervously, and it haunted him into illness, then told him to slay her.

It all started while he was working on an adjoining farm. There was a dispute over land. His strength left him, he said, and he couldn't sleep at certain periods of the month. A huge black cat came into his bedroom in the dead of night and grew so large that it filled the room and suffocated him.

Bremer Suspect May Have Been in Omaha

Omaha.—A picture of Arthur R. Barker, sought as a suspect in the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer of St. Paul, was partially identified Thursday night by an Omaha filling station operator as that of a man who bought gas at the station on the night of Feb. 23. F. E. Stover, the station operator, said "That looks like him, all right," when shown a picture of Barker. "He was the passenger in the car and paid for the gas with a $5 Kansas City bank bill which I turned over to police."

Stover could not identify a picture of Alvin Karpis, 25, also sought in the Bremer case, as being the other man in the car. He said he looked into the back of the car and saw two machine guns, partly covered, on the back seat. The car, Stover said, had Texas license plates.

In commenting on the picture of Barker, Stover said "I noted this fellow because of the eyes and nose particularly. The man who bought the gas looked me right in the eye as does the man in the picture. Stover said that two other cars, each carrying two men, followed the first car into the station. The latter two cars bore Nebraska license plates. The driver of each of the two cars, he said, bought five gallons of gas, one man giving a $1 bill on the federal reserve bank at Chicago.

"I didn't mention the other two cars at the time because I had no reason to connect them and none of the occupants of the three cars appeared to know the others," Stover commented.

Advised of the identity of the man whose picture he was shown, Stover said "those fellows are desperate men, you know, and they might come back this way and get me. I don't know that I could swear under oath that this is the man, after all, but I will say that this picture looks more like him than any other I've been shown."

"See it before you buy it."
