Mrs. W. A. White who were over to Wessington Springs, South Dakota, where they were visiting with relatives and where they remained for some four days, returning home early last week. Being in business here and knowing the situation as to business and crops it was natural that Mr. Bucknell should observe conditions as they existed there. The drouth was very severe there for many months, but just of late there has been some rains which has livened the thistles and made the face of the country look somewhat green. The farmers are getting an allowance for seed to plant even at this late day but have to work two days per week for the seed, when they feel that they should work these two days getting the seed into the ground and thus allowing it an opportunity to grow. Mr. Bucknell said that in driving of the 500 miles in northern Nebraska and South Dakota he did not see enough good wheat to make a biscuit, and that is not so very much.

Greenwood Plays Good Ball. In a game which was played in Greenwood between the Greenwood team and a select team from Lincoln, a very tightly played game was enjoyed by the large crowd which was present. This surely was a good game and when it comes to that they have been playing excellent ball in every contest. They now have played eight games and out of the eight have won seven.

Find Improvement in Employment Over State

Reports Released by State Director Show Gains in Private Employment as Well as Public.

Acting State Director E. V. Cornell of the national employment service has given to the press his figures on the employment situation for the past five months and which shows that 18,348 have been placed in public enterprises while 18,472 have been placed in lines of private employment.

In the public lines the largest number had been added in May while in March and April there were peaks in the private employment.

In the background of these figures, we find the very significant change which has taken place in our industrial life from a social and economic standpoint.

One may note from these figures that Private Employment during the past five months has not only kept pace with the placements on Public Works jobs but has slightly surpassed them. A slight drop in private placements the past two months may, in some measure, reflect the drouth condition of our state through the inability of agriculture to absorb its usual quota of workers.

In the past, however, it has been necessary for most of the unemployed to trust to their own initiative or to the initiative of friends in finding employment, or to the use of good, bad, or indifferent private or public employment offices. Thousands of persons have also drifted aimlessly from city to city, and from state to state, and tramped thousands of miles in search of work.

While under the terms of the Industrial Recovery Act, the National Reemployment Service was set up primarily to handle the matter of employment on Public Works jobs. A strenuous effort has been made to efficiently serve employers in private industry and business through the same offices.

Statistical records are compiled and forwarded to Washington weekly and real social and economic planning is beginning to come forward in the intelligent handling of the distribution and employment of labor.

The National Reemployment Service, in each county, coordinates and centralizes employment opportunities for workers. It is essential for each applicant to list his qualifications very completely to facilitate this service.

The Nebraska National Reemployment Service is proceeding on a careful course of selection and training of personnel, so that in each county unemployed may register and be interviewed by a trained personnel worker, who will place their applications in the proper channels for labor clearance between the counties of the state.
