Box Social and Program. "Say dad, where did you ever meet mother before you were married?" "Why, son, didn't I ever tell you?"

That newspaper advertising will impress a business on the buyer's mind.

The only way a near-dead business can be revived or a live business kept alive is by newspaper advertising.

In these days and times every business concern is facing the keenest sort of competition and the only business concern that will get ahead in the race for business are those that bring to their help the mighty power of advertising.

The infallible proof of good merchandise or service is the demand.

There is absolutely no guess work about advertised goods and service.

The constant demand for advertised goods and service shows they have stood the test.

News advertising gives plain, every-day facts and that is what the people want.

Nothing approaches newspaper advertising in display, efficiency and real order-getting appeal.

It was way back there in the good old days when we young people used to go to literary society that was held every week at the school house.

Yes, I can remember the day as well as if it were just yesterday. We had all been over to Uncle John's to his barn raisin' the week before and who should be there but the new girl who was stayin' over to old Pete's place. Boy she was a beauty, too. Yes, you've guessed it, that girl's your mother now.

"But how did you begin to get together, dad?"

"Well, you see, the next week after the barn raisin' there was a big community box social at the school house and I was lucky enough to get her box, boy did we have fun! I shall never forget that day—"

25% Production May Be Excused

Corn-hog allotment committees will have the power in 1935 to turn down a contract of a producer who in actual fact has retired and who is trying to draw benefit payments. The ruling says that unless the producer has a good reason and is excused by the allotment committee, he must have planted 25 per cent of his corn base and farrowed 25 per cent of his hog base in 1934 in order to qualify as a bona fide operator. The same ruling says that in order to fulfill his contract in 1935, the signer must either be excused by his allotment committee or must plant 25 per cent of his corn base and farrow 25 per cent of his hog base in 1935.

In recent district conferences allotment committees were inclined to believe that lack of feed and lack of breeding stock in the drought areas would be sufficient reason for failure to farrow pigs in 1935. They thought they would use the ruling only when it was evident that a man was trying to pose as a producer only to get the benefit payment. Any farmer who is doing the best he could to make a living on the farm, but who happened to fail to produce up to his minimum will probably be excused in the drought territory by the allotment committee. Some misunderstanding of this ruling has already been noticed over the state. Farmers who have sold all of their hogs have been worrying about the ruling which they thought was a strict requirement that they produce 25 per cent of their base in order to get their 1935 payment. So far as the state corn-hog administration is concerned, it will recommend that allotment committees administer this ruling according to their common sense and good judgment.

Quite a large proportion of farmers who rent part or all of their land have not yet made their final arrangements with landlords for 1935, and are unable to make out their applications at this time. Associations all over the state are preparing to keep the application signing open a few days after the regularly scheduled signing days in order to take care of the men who have not completed their leasing arrangements.

The next step in the procedure will be the call for annual meetings in each of the communities, and the election of 1935 community activities. The chairman of each community committee is automatically a member of the board of directors of the county association, and will attend a directors meeting within a day or two after the community meetings are held. The 1935 committees will take charge of the program immediately after the board

Farmers Signing Applications

With all the community educational meetings out of the way the county corn-hog control association is now turning its attention to the signing of applications with farmers. First reports indicate that 80 to 90 per cent of the men signing up first are those who will continue to operate their farms exactly as they did in 1934.

The producer who continues to farm his land as he did last year, and who had a contract last year, can finish his application blank in 10 or 15 minutes when he comes to the sign-up arranged by the county association. Application writers say most of the farmers are agreeably surprised this year to find it is no trouble at all to make out the applications.

Convenient blanks will be made available within the next few days and supplied to those who handle hogs in the county and also available at the office of the county corn-hog association.

The new ruling about feeder pigs is likely to remove a good share of the requests for a permitted production under another ruling in the 1935 program. It will also put an end to some of the worry which prospective contract signers have had about the pigs they have already bought and sold since December 1, 1934.

of directors meeting. The meetings and elections will be in the nature of annual meetings of an association which is continuing to function. They will in no sense be an organization meeting of a new association.

Remove Restrictions on Feeder Pigs. The corn-hog section met one of the first problems of the 1935 corn-hog producer when they issued ruling 124 removing restrictions regarding the purchase of feeder pigs. The previous provision of the 1925 corn-hog contract and rulings seemed to work a hardship upon both sellers and buyers of feeder pigs in the drought territory.

The new ruling says that a contract signer in 1935 can buy as many feeder, stocker, or breeding hogs as he wants to buy from any one and the only requirement is that he make a definite record of the purchase and mark the pigs in some way so that he can prove compliance with his contract regarding the number he farrows himself. If this record is not accurately kept, the pigs he buys will be considered as if they were farrowed on the farm.

Convenient blanks will be made available within the next few days and supplied to those who handle hogs in the county and also available at the office of the county corn-hog association.
