

Lamb and New Bonnet Two Easter Traditions

Leg of lamb and bonnet new, two Easter traditions. But leg of lamb is not the only roast suitable for this Sunday which stands out above all other Sundays of the year. You can have as much fun selecting your lamb roast as you do your Easter hat—and there are almost as many styles from which to choose. "Be your family large or small, be your budget rigid or elastic, be the dinner stately or simple, there is a lamb roast to meet your need," says Inez S. Willson, home economist.

Spring vegetables rally valiantly to the cause when planning your Easter menu around lamb; they seem to have a special affinity for this delicately flavored meat. Fruits, as an appetizer, make an excellent beginning for the Easter dinner, or you may punctuate the meal with a fruit salad, or finish with a flourish by serving a simple fruit dessert.

In the menu suggested below any lamb roast may be used instead of the leg and the menu may be added to or taken from to make the dinner more elaborate or simpler, as one wishes.

In place of the leg of lamb, the cushion style shoulder roast shown in the picture will fit nicely into this menu as will any of the other lamb roasts, the recipes for which are given below.

Cushion Style Lamb Shoulder with Sausage Dressing

Have the bones removed from a shoulder of lamb and the roast sewed, leaving one side open for putting in the dressing. Wipe with a damp cloth, rub inside and out with salt, pepper and garlic, if desired, and pack lightly with the sausage dressing.

Sausage Dressing

1/2 pound bulk sausage	1 cup of bread crumbs
2 tablespoons of salt and pepper
grated onion	Stock or water
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Fry the sausage with the onion and parsley, stirring constantly until the meat is cooked enough so it separates into particles. Add the crumbs and seasonings and enough liquid to make a moist dressing. While hot, pack into the lamb shoulder. Sew or skewer the opening. Place on a rack in an open pan and set in a slow oven (300° F.) Cook until done, allowing about 35 minutes to the pound of meat.

Currant Mint Sauce

Break up a glass of currant jelly with a fork, but do not break it. Add about 2 tablespoons of finely chopped mint leaves and a little grated orange rind.

Barbecued Lamb

Leg of Lamb	1/2 cup water
1/2 cup Worcestershire sauce	Salt and Pepper
shiraz sauce	1/2 cup catsup

Place the leg of lamb skin side down on a rack in a roasting pan. Cut across the meat two or three times. Season with salt and pepper. Mix the Worcestershire sauce, catsup and pour over the roast. Roast in a moderate oven (300° F.) until done, allowing about 30 minutes to the pound. Baste the roast frequently with the sauce.

Stuffed Breast of Lamb

2 lamb breasts	2 cups of cooked brown rice
1/2 cup of sliced onions	Salt and Pepper to season
4 tablespoons fat

Cook the onions slowly in the fat. Add the rice and seasoning. Heat and stir so that all will be well blended.

Have a pocket cut in the lamb breasts and fill with the dressing. Tie or skewer into shape. Place on a rack in an open roasting pan. Cook in a moderate oven (350° F.) for about 1 1/2 hours.

Crown Roast of Lamb

Crown of lamb	1/2 cup of diced celery
Slices of salt pork	1/2 cup chopped mushrooms
1/2 pound pork sausage	1/2 cup milk
2 eggs beaten	One pinch of sage crumbs
1/2 cup cracker crumbs	Salt and Pepper

Have a crown of lamb prepared at market. Combine sausage with cracker crumbs, celery and mushrooms. Season with salt, pepper and sage. Season with salt, pepper and sage. Moisten with slightly beaten eggs and milk. Season crown with salt and pepper and fill with dressing. Wrap the rib ends with salt pork. Place it on a rack in an open roasting pan. Do not cover and do not add water. Put in a moderate oven (300-350° F.) and roast until done, about two hours. To serve, remove salt pork and decorate rib ends with paper frills, potato or carrot balls.

Army in Service to Battle Disease in the Nation

Survey Shows That Hundred Are Enlisted to Save Human Life From Disease.

New York, N. Y.—A standing army, roughly estimated at more than a million and a half persons, is enlisted, directly or indirectly, in caring for the sick and preventing disease in the United States. This great force includes the skilled group of physicians and surgeons together with dentists, nurses, osteopaths, chiropractors, naturopaths and healers of various kinds. In its rank and file are pharmacists, drug clerks, laboratory and clerical assistants, hospital workers and superintendents, and medical social workers, a recently annexed group which has already contributed definitely to the healing art.

Analysing this standing army, statisticians of one of the leading life insurance companies list 161,000 legally qualified physicians at its head. The statisticians state that the number of doctors per unit of population has been declining steadily since the beginning of the century, although the United States still has the highest per capita proportion of any country in the world. They report 125 physicians per 100,000 inhabitants in 1930; 137 in 1920; 164 in 1910, and 173 in 1900. This decline is attributed to a stiffening of the qualifications demanded before a license to practice medicine is granted.

The number of physicians in the country appears to be adequate. But the tendency of doctors to congregate in the larger urban centers, which in many instances are probably overstaffed, leaves many rural areas suffering from an under-supply of physicians.

"One interesting phase of the problem of medical care," the statisticians comment, "is the direct relation between the per capita income in different sections of the country and the concentration of physicians. As income increases, so, too, does the ratio of physicians. In the South, with the lowest per capita income in 1929, there was the smallest number of physicians per 100,000 population, namely, 100 per 100,000 in the East South Central states, 107 in the West South Central states, and 111 in the South Atlantic states."

"On the other hand, the Pacific coast, New England and Middle Atlantic states, with the greatest concentration of income had the largest ration of doctors, that is: 159 per 100,000 in the Pacific Coast states, 140 in New England, and 138 in the Middle Atlantic states."

The ratio of trained nurses to population is reported as increasing rapidly from 16 per 100,000 in 1900 to 80 in 1910, 141 in 1920, and 240 in 1930—an increase of 1,400 per cent in 30 years. In 1930, 55 per cent of the graduate nurses were engaged in private duty; 9 per cent in public health work and industrial medical service; and 36 per cent served in hospitals and clinics. Nurses also have a tendency to settle in the larger communities, where wealth is greatest and hospitals most numerous. In addition, about 150,000 women of all degrees of skill meet a real need in time of sickness by acting as practical nurses.

About 500 physiotherapists and 1,400 clinical laboratory workers are also reported as serving physicians directly. To this number must be added 3,000 masseurs, some of whom work under doctors' orders, while others do not.

These statistics are not as definite as could be desired, but the insurance company's statisticians consider these estimates as accurate as they could be made by the committee of the costs of medical care after several years of research.

Dentistry, which has become recognized as an important form of medical service, has shown real progress since the beginning of the century. In 1900 there were about 30,000 dentists in the United States, or 29 to every 100,000 in the population; in 1930 there were more than 70,000 dentists, or 58 to every 100,000 persons. Dental assistants and attendants have increased from two per 100,000 in 1910, the first year the United States census listed this occupational group, to 11 in 1930, which is equivalent to 14,000 workers. In addition the committee lists more than 2,000 oral hygienists, 10,000 dental technicians, and 10,000 other dental assistants of various kinds.

Among those providing a variety of health service, the 1930 census lists about 36,000 other practitioners, or about one fourth the number of qualified physicians, classified as

200 Million Rail Crossing Plan Outlined

President Announces Friday Government Will Rush Money Out of Work Relief Fund.

Washington, April 12.—President Roosevelt announced Friday the federal government will rush a 200 million dollar grade crossing elimination program out of the work relief fund.

Pointing to the tragic death of 14 school children in a grade crossing accident at Rockville, Md., last night as convincing proof of the need of immediate measures, the president said this procedure would be followed:

1. The federal government will pay the entire cost of the projects, except for the land which must be purchased by the states or municipalities.
2. Only grade crossings on main line railroads will be included in the program.

Burden of Roads.

The president said the work would be administered by the agriculture department's bureau of roads.

Because the railroads have been abandoning many branch lines, the president said elimination of grade crossings on anything but main lines might be wasteful. He declared bus and branch line traffic on railroads unprofitable.

Cites Importance.

With the advent of high-speed, stream-lined trains on main lines, the necessity of grade crossing elimination becomes increasingly important, the president said.

He discussed the program with Undersecretary of Agriculture Sugwell, who will direct the work.

The president also took up with Robert Fechner, Civil Conservation Corps director, plans for enlisting 300,000 young men into that organization from the ranks of the unemployed within two months.

Commission to Send Men to Washington

Nebraska Will Join Other States in Opposing Holding Bill in the United States Senate.

The railway commission voted Friday, Commissioner Bollen dissenting, to send Commissioner Maupin and Attorney Vall to Washington to represent the interests of the state in several important matters before congress and the federal communications commission.

The two will attend the senate hearings on what is known as the holding company bill, and join the other forty-six states that have commissions in opposing various provisions in the measure.

"Public attention has been so generally centered on the bill," said Chairman Drake, "because of the holding company section, which is only one of a number. The intent of the sections which we oppose is to remove from state commissions the regulation of public utilities and center it all in a gigantic bureau at Washington. This is not in the public interest, and we propose to help all we can to defeat this new effort to centralize power at the national capital."

Over Bollen's objection the commission voted to ask each party to the suit brought by Bollen against Auditor Price to halt the issuance of refund checks to farmers who paid excess corn inspection fees thru the commission to file their briefs within the shortest possible time and ask for an advancement.

The supreme court will cease holding sittings in June, and it is desirable that a speedy decision be rendered, it is set out in the resolution adopted. It also recites that the legislature has directed the commission to refund these excess fees; that Bollen sought and was denied in district court an injunction, but has appealed to the supreme court; that the matter is of great importance to the farmers, and that submission can be secured at June 3rd session of attorneys will expedite filings.

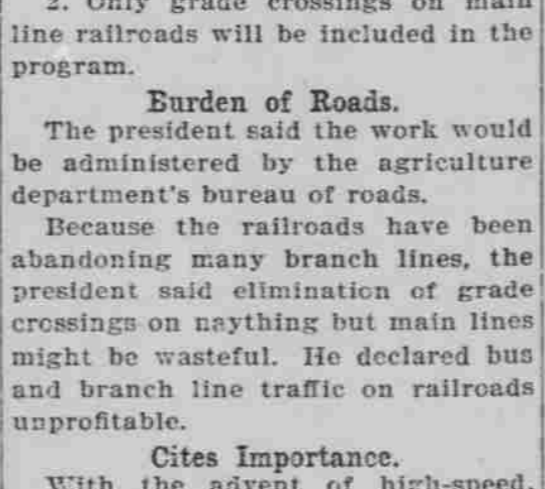

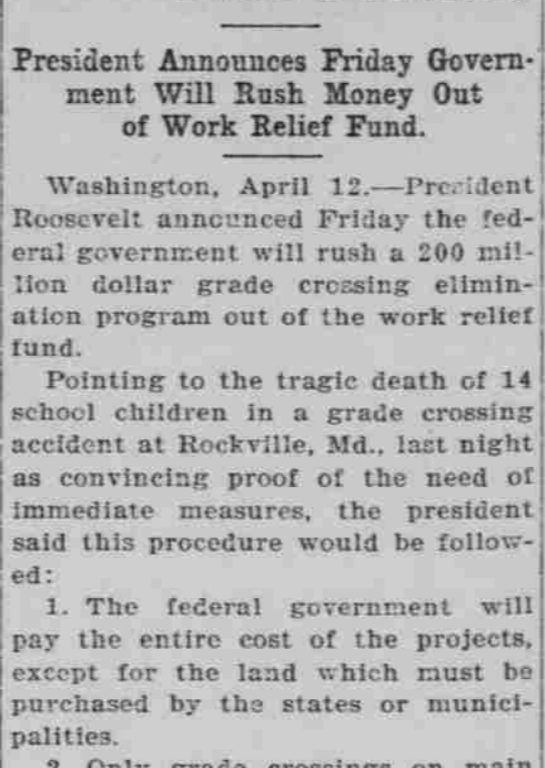

NORRIS ALTERS HOLC BILL

Washington.—Without a record vote, the senate adopted an amendment to the home owners loan bill to permit new applications by distressed home owners for mortgage loans for sixty days after enactment of the measure.

The liberalization was added by Senator Norris to the house bill which increased the bond-issuing authority of the Home Owners Loan corporation from 3 billions to $4,750,000,000. Final passage of the bill went over until Friday.

The senate previously had adopted 43 to 30 an amendment by Senator Russell barring employment of men who are officers or employees of private firms engaged in lending money on real estate. Any such men now on the HOLC payrolls would have to be dismissed within ninety days.
