

President Sees a Pick-Up in Employment

Public Works to Slacken as Private Industry Is Able to Take Up Part of Load.

Forecasting 1935 would begin "a pickup of the greater part of the unemployment slack," President Roosevelt Monday at Washington ordered work-relief officials to "slow down or drop" job-giving projects if relief workers could get on private pay rolls.

Forty-eight state works progress directors and Harry L. Hopkins heard the president give final instructions for the four billion program.

"We all know that there is going to be a very definite pickup all over the United States," he said. "We are working slowly toward the employment problem. This year is going to be the beginning of a pickup of the greater part of the unemployment slack."

Unusually Optimistic.

The president's statement was regarded by officials as unusually optimistic for Mr. Roosevelt.

Acknowledging there probably would still be a "considerable number" of unemployed after "July 1, 1936," which he has set as the date for virtual completion of the program, Mr. Roosevelt insisted that revived business conditions would "eliminate the major problem."

Meanwhile, he urged the administrators "to go to work with your coats off so the dirt will fly very soon."

"Make or Break."

With Hopkins' warning at the opening of the conference that the next six months will "make or break" the works program, state directors also heard the president reaffirm the principle that projects, though useful, must not cost too much, and that there must be no discrimination because of politics, race or religion.

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized the word "politics."

"That works two ways. It means that you can't hurt the enemy or help our friends. The work must be considered from the humane point of view solely," he said.

Many Heartaches.

"There will be many heartaches for people proposing expensive projects. Your difficulties and heartburns in turning down these projects will be no more than I have myself."

Hopkins' assistants disclosed the amount of federal funds to be available for each state would not be made public.

New Allotment.

Two other developments stood out as Hopkins opened a three-day conference:

1. The works allotment board recommended $42,610,557 in additional projects to the president.
2. The relief administration reported a decline in the city relief population in the April-May period which Hopkins attributed mainly "to improved business conditions and to seasonal increases in agricultural employment."

Annual Crops Day.

The annual Crops Day at the Nebraska college of agriculture will be held Tuesday, July 2, according to word received this week. The event is being held later than usual due to the late maturing of small grain. Cass county farmers have been invited to attend.

A varied program is planned for farmers who attend with experimental work at the agronomy farm, east of Lincoln, under special observation during the afternoon. A speaking program has been arranged for the morning hours.

Discussion of weed control, pasture improvement, experimental tests with Cheyenne wheat and a hybrid corn program are scheduled for the morning. Dr. F. D. Kelm, chairman of the agronomy department, will preside over the session. An illustrated lecture on "Exploring the World for New Crops," will be an added feature.

Improved Small Grain Varieties.

Spring small grain in Cass county now has developed sufficiently to show mixture of oats and barley in many fields seeded to shipped in seed. We mention this to call farmers' attention to the need of improving small grain varieties.

Farmers have shipped in approximately 12,000 bushels of oats and 1,000 bushels of barley for seed purposes. Even government seed oats of which 800,000 bushels were distributed over Nebraska contained approximately 6 per cent barley despite the fact that it was picked as carefully as possible at Omaha and Sioux City but it was not possible to secure oats free of barley.

Attend Judging School.

4-H cooking and clothing clubs of Cass county were well represented when 46 of their members and 10 local leaders attended practice judging school at the agricultural college, Lincoln, Saturday, June 15th.

The classes provided and the instruction given not only gave the girls a better idea of standards but also gave them a better understanding of club requirements and the goals toward which they are working.

Home Economics judging has been somewhat revised, especially the method of giving reasons. This has been for the purpose of standardizing all 4-H judging.

Program Expenditures Shown in Report.

Rental and benefit payments to producers co-operating in the adjustment programs, expenditures in connection with programs for removal and conservation of surplus agricultural commodities, and other adjustment expenditures chargeable against receipts from processing taxes reached a total of $7,900,623.35 as of May 1, 1935, cumulative during the two years, since the date of organization May 12, 1933. The Agricultural Adjustment Administration stated in its comptroller's monthly report. For the same period processing tax receipts totalled $824,430,579. The report also lists expenditures amounting to $211,533,906 up to May 1, 1935, which are chargeable against net appropriations of $398,418,639, or are financed through special trust fund receipts, and which are not financed by processing taxes. The total of all expenditures up to May 1 for which funds are provided either by processing taxes or by specific appropriations is shown as $1,001,596,291, made up of rental and benefits of $727,391,228; removal of surplus operations involving $225,430,069, and administrative expenses of $48,774,996.

Interesting Facts from Home Accounts.

Many interesting facts have been brought to light through the co-operation of 260 farm home account keepers of Nebraska regarding the income and expenditures for the home, especially when comparing the year 1934 when the state passed through the severe drouth, with other more normal years.

For instance, in 1933 the average total living value for 164 farm families was $918. In 1934 the average for 239 families was $1,045.73. This change may be due to the fact that for several years clothing and equipment on hand has been used but it became necessary last year to make repairs or replacements. Some of this increase in total living values may be attributed to the value increase of both farm products and prices of goods purchased. Some cash was made available last year from benefit payments and some cash was received by farm families for labor other than on the farm. Due to the drouth, farm home products in fruit, vegetables, dairy, and in some cases poultry products, were limited or lacking. This condition has made necessary the purchase of more food. When goods and services furnished by the farm are taken into consideration and we find they contribute as much as 32% of the total living value, one commences to realize the importance of the use of products such as eggs, milk, cream, butter, etc. An analysis of the total value of these products used shows a decrease in 1934 as compared with the three years preceding, particularly in the use of eggs, milk, butter, etc. An analysis of the total value of these products used shows a decrease in 1934 as compared with the three years preceding, particularly in the use of eggs, milk, butter, fruits and vegetables. The amount of the reduction which occurred in the value of fruits and vegetables alone made up the greater part of the reduction. This may be attributed to the drouth during 1934. No doubt it has been true that farm families have not used as generously as they would like to have used of their own eggs, milk, cream, butter and poultry, due to the scarcity of them.

It is also noticeable to find an increase of nearly one-third in amount of home butchered meat during 1934 over 1933 alone.

Spray for Codling Moth.

A report from the State Extension Horticulturist, E. H. Hoppert, states that conditions have been favorable for codling moth development during the last week. The first cover spray for the codling moth should be on June 19th or 20th. It is better to be a little too early than too late. In spraying be sure to cover the tops of the trees and the inside. The principal worm damage is in the upper third of the tree. The only way to find out if you are spraying the tops thoroughly is to climb up into the tree tops and check up.

Use 1 1/2 pounds of lead arsenate to 50 gallons of water in young orchards where infestation is light. In old, badly infested orchards, use 2 pounds to 50 gallons.

Scab has failed to show much development and with warm weather coming it probably will not be much of a problem, but such diseases as frog eye and blotch can easily become serious. It would be wise, therefore, to use some fungicide with the lead arsenate at this time. There is danger of burning, however when using sulfur compounds, so don't use any sulfur compounds when temperatures run above 85 degrees. If lime sulfur is used, make the concentration weak, 2-3 quarts of the liquid or 2-2 1/2 pounds of dry lime sulfur to 50 gallons and add 1 pound lime. With these weaker solutions it has been found that soluble arsenic acid is likely to be formed, which causes burning on the fruit and leaves. Add 1 pound of hydrated lime to 50 gallons to neutralize this acid. Where blotch has been bad in previous years, Bordeaux mixture 2-4-50 would be preferable.

Lead Arsenate for Cabbage Worm and Cabbage Looper.

Numerous requests have been received the past week on how to get rid of cabbage worms. The cabbage looper is the young, or worm, of a medium-sized gray moth. It is pale green and delicate looking when first hatched. When larger, it becomes striped, and gets its name of looper by its habit of doubling up, or looping, as it walks. It eats all kinds of cabbage-like plants, and sometimes peas, beets, celery, and lettuce, and even attacks tomato and potato. The cabbage worms begin work early in the season. After eating the outer leaves, they attack the tender inner leaves as they form, hiding in the young heads where it is hard to reach them with a spray. The cabbage worm also feeds on cauliflower, kale, collards, turnips, radishes and horseradish. The best treatment for cabbage worms and cabbage looper is spraying with lead arsenate. Take 1 level teaspoonful of powdered lead arsenate for each pint of water. Mix thoroughly and apply with sprayer. If lead-arsenate paste is used, take 2 teaspoonful for each each pint of water to make a spray mixture.

Washington.—Secretary Wallace, in a letter to all members of the American Newspaper Publishers association, asserted that the proposed AAA amendments do not contain any authorization for a processing tax on newsprint.

The farm act legislation, now before the house, contains no permission, he added, either to regulate advertising or to interfere with the use of private brands on food labels.
