General Strike to be Voted on by Omaha Union

Organized Street Car Men's Request to Be Issue Friday Night at Meeting.

Omaha.—A decision will be made next Friday night by the Omaha central labor union on the request of 268 striking organized employes of the Omaha and Council Bluffs street railway company that a general strike be called in support of the street car strike, now in its fourth month.

Charles Nelson, president of the central labor union, said the request of the striking tram workers will be placed before the membership of the central labor union at its regular meeting Friday night. The entire membership will vote on it.

Nelson said the executive committee of the central union will take action as directed by the vote of the membership. The executive committee has no power to act unless directed to do so by the membership, Nelson said.

The street car strike began in April when organized employes of the tram company walked out, seeking higher wages and shorter hours as the main objectives. After a period of minor violence, rioting broke out in South Omaha. Two men were killed and more than 150 injured before Nebraska national guardsmen took over the city under martial law for a five-day period. Later rioting broke out in Council Bluffs, but was quickly halted by Mayor Hugh P. Finerty.

Attempts of Governor Cochran to bring about a settlement of the strike failed when non-strikers refused to arbitrate the seniority question. An arbitration committee, acting without representation of the non-strikers following refusal of the latter group to arbitrate, returned an award restoring to the strikers their full seniority, but non-strikers answered with a suit in federal court to prevent enforcement of the award. The court has not ruled on the suit.

How About the First Drop? The Maxwell House coffee has been highly advertised as being good to the last drop, and so with the advice and consent of Ralph Green the home airplane was named in honor of the famous coffee and after the three young men, George Blessing, Virgil Woods and Mr. Miller had worked long and hard on the machine and had perfected it, they assayed to get close to the plane and have been taxiing about on the landing field, if we are permitted to call it a landing field before it has flown and in so doing a couple of weeks ago while passing over an uneven portion of the ground had a mishap of breaking the propeller.

They immediately sent for a new one and placed it on the plane and on Monday evening taxied about the grounds. So on Tuesday evening they concluded to fly. Getting a good start over some ground which was hard and firm they had to run over some freshly plowed ground which retarded the speed of the plane and as it was rising nicely a fence popped up in the foreground and the plane did not clear the fence with the result that propeller was broken and the machine given a land loop, badly wrecking the plane and bruising Virgil Wood, the pilot, cutting a severe gash on his forehead.

The young men do not give up easily, for they are to secure another propeller and make the necessary repairs and try it again. This time the plane would have flown but for striking the soft ground, for it had risen from the ground, but not sufficiently to clear the fence.

Very Frequently Desired. The beauty of pipe organ music commends it to all, and a large percentage of those who make use of our funeral home elect to include, as a part of the services, at least one or two selections on our pipe organ.
