Schools Opened Monday

The Greenwood schools opened last Monday with a large enrollment, all the students being back with renewed vigor and determination after their three months' vacation. John Ballanger was on hand to care for the little ones, who have to cross both the highway and the railroad tracks to get to and from school. Traffic on the highway is very heavy at this time and not to have a guard there would be inviting danger of the gravest sort.

A contest has just been concluded, in which there were two sides competing with each other for the acquisition of new members, and with the new and old members present, the house was well filled. The sides represented were designated as the Blue and the Gold, the latter winning over the former by some 45 points. As a result, the Blues will have to entertain the Golds some time in the near future.

Discuss Dismissal of County Suits on Gasoline Tax

No Agreement Reached in Conference With Twenty Counties—Cass County a Party.

No agreement was reached at Thursday's afternoon conference of Governor Cochran, members of state assistance committee and other interested persons, over the proposal that twenty counties opposing the gasoline relief tax law should dismiss their suit. County Attorney Pollock of Stanton county, a leader in the filing of the suit, held out for a court order declaring void that part of the law which provides that proceeds of a 1 cent gasoline tax for relief should be distributed on a basis of need.

The law provides that proceeds of this tax be used for old age pension and relief, and it is now apparent that all the money will be needed for old age pensions. The counties suing are those which aren't on relief and so are required to pay the tax without any prospect of getting any of its benefits. It is anticipated federal relief will be halted in November at the latest.

Assistant Attorney General Murphy said the state asks for dismissal of the case and County Attorney Pollock countered with an offer to file a statement with the court that the twenty counties suing are willing to change their plea by stating that they will be satisfied with an order of the court declaring void the one phrase "distributed on a basis of need," and ask the court to hold the act valid with that exception. Pollock is to confer with the twenty counties and their legal representatives and another conference is to be held to agree upon the nature of the statement to be filed by the counties and by the attorney general.

May Have No Effect.

Whether the court will pay any attention to filings of the parties is a matter of speculation. It is admitted by all concerned that the parties to the suit cannot "stipulate" or tell the court what the law is or what is constitutional and what is not, as that is the sole power of the court. Motions of any sort are allowed to be filed in a suit prior to judgment.

The suit challenging the constitutionality of the 1 cent gas tax for relief or old age assistance was filed as an original action in the supreme court June 6 and argued and submitted a short time later. Stipulated decrees in suits not affecting constitutionality of law but merely relating to rights of litigants have been filed by that court as agreed decrees. In this case intervenors have not been consulted as to their attitude. They are the Nebraska Petroleum Marketers, Inc., and Calvin J. Stover, as a taxpayer.

In the conference it was argued that counties which are plaintiffs have nothing to lose if they dismiss or lose this case, as relief distributions are soon to end and may have already ceased, but if they win the case and the tax is declared void they will lose distribution of the tax for old age pensions. It was urged that if the entire tax is distributed for old age pensions all counties will share on an equitable basis as one county has probably as many eligible pensioners 65 years of age as any other considering population, and that this basis is a fair one for distribution.

Fear Loss of Aid.

If the twenty counties win the suit it is claimed there will be practically no state funds to meet federal aid for old age pensions.

If the attorney general files a statement with the supreme court, Assistant Attorney General Murphy said it would probably recite that under changed conditions, with relief distribution on the verge of going out of existence, all relief to be turned over to WPA, the state is willing to have the clause "distributed on a basis of need" declared void and the balance of the act in force, but it will not change the state's defense and admit that any part of the act is invalid.

The 1 cent gasoline tax will raise an estimated 3 million dollars in the sixteen months it is to be effective, up to July 1, 1936, when the governor is authorized to declare the tax ceased if he desires. This fund, plus about 1 million dollars a year from liquor taxes, is what the state expects to use to match federal aid for pension. The July report of the state treasurer showed $798,219 in the state assistance fund from gas tax, and the August report will add at least $200,000 to this, making more than 1 million dollars in the fund.

Fred Ahrens, who has been here from Crawford, Nebraska, for the past few days, Friday concluded the negotiations by which he disposed of the 160 acre farm that he has owned west of Mynard.

The farm was purchased by Joseph Peppal, of Omaha, who purchased the farm as an investment and the farming of the place will be continued by Carl Meisinger who has been there for the past few years since Mr. Ahrens moved to the west.
