Farmers See Greater Value in Crop Statistics

Agricultural Census Show a Heavy Shift of Lands to Cattle and Food Crops.

Washington.—Wheat, restricted in the chief production areas by the farm program, was shown by the agricultural census to be spreading into new territory. Figures based on complete tabulations for over half the nation showed many farmers in non-commercial wheat sections here turning new lands into the production of grain.

The census reports showed a heavy shift of lands to cattle and food crops in recent years, with potatoes leading the way. The AAA has said that in general there was no relation between the increase in potato acreage and the acres taken out of production by its adjustment programs.

There were fewer horses and mules, however, in most all states, even tho the nation as a whole had 500,000 new farms and 69,000,000 more acres under plow.

Experts said the shift to food crops and cattle was largely explained by the hosts of former city workers who had taken small tracts of land in suburban areas and were endeavoring to grow their own food.

In most cases, they said, the first thing the new farmers bought was a sow, pig and a few acres of potatoes helped tide these amateur farmers over the depression, they said, but the home production of these necessities also cut down the potential market of the professional farmer.

In the cotton growing states, the figures showed a strong shift to food crops. Alabama planted 1,400,000 fewer acres of cotton in 1934 than in 1929, but it had half a million more cattle, a million acres more in corn, 8,000 more acres in wheat, 12,000 more acres in Irish potatoes and 40-

000 more acres in sweet potatoes. In the western wheat states, drought complicated the picture. Kansas had two million more acres in farms than in 1929, but harvested 7,645,000 fewer. Four million fewer acres of wheat were harvested in Kansas in 1934 than in 1929, and 3,500,000 fewer of corn.

Lawmakers are at Liberty to Give Up Seats

Governor Cochran's Mail Open to Any Who May Feel Disqualified to Serve.

Of the original two house legislature which Governor Cochran will call in special session within one month, three members are deceased, one is serving a prison term and an unknown number have apparently disqualified themselves by joining what is known as the federal brigade, and some are too ill to attend.

With a dozen or more prospective vacancies to be filled, many on first thought remarked that Governor Cochran ought to have little trouble in getting a membership easy to get along with, since he has the appointive power.

On second thought those who inquire into the legal method of filling vacancies in the legislature find that the governor apparently has no choice. He must appoint those chosen by county committees or refuse to appoint. The law states that county committees "elect successors" to fill vacancies in the legislature, and the governor shall thereafter, while the legislature is in session, appoint "in accordance therewith" and transmit the same to the secretary of state who shall certify the name or names to the proper house where the vacancies shall have occurred. And the successor to the vacancy is "elected" by the party committee of the same party to which the previous incumbent belonged. So the governor has nothing to say about who shall succeed to a vacancy in the legislature, nor his political affiliation.

Who Gives Notice.

This election to fill a vacancy is to take place in party committees after the governor has received notice of a vacancy and he in turn has notified the proper party committee. It shall be done by committee or committees when a district contains two or more counties within five days after notice from the governor, or the governor is empowered, "while the legislature is in session," to appoint to fill the vacancy.

Just how the governor is to receive notice that a vacancy has occurred is left by the law to imagination. The governor cannot pick vacancies out of the air. The constitution provides how vacancies occur, but not how the governor shall recognize one when it occurs.

Vacancies occur in public office, says the constitution, by reason of death, removal from the state, or in case of legislators, from the district, also by resignation, conviction of a felony, impeachment or "becoming of unsound mind."

Vacancies and eligibility to hold a seat in the legislature may be two different things. The eligibility is passed upon by the legislature when it convenes and passes upon credentials. The constitution says one elected to the legislature shall be an elector and must have lived in his district one year when elected. Another section says one elected or appointed to the legislature shall not receive any appointment to a "state office" during his term, but it does not say he loses his seat in the legislature but that the appointment to state office is void.

Another section of the constitution says no person holding "office" under the authority of the United States or any "lucrative" office under authority of the senate shall be "eligible" to or have a seat in the legislature. Certain small offices may be held, such as precinct or township office, justice of the peace, notaries public and offices in the militia.

Question of Authority.

But neither the governor nor any political committee is authorized to see that persons holding such prohibited offices are ousted from a seat after the mumber has been admitted and sworn in as all members were when they took the oath of office. Nor is any one given authority to say that a legislator who holds a job in one of the federal alphabetical departments is holding "office" under authority of the United States. It has been pointed out by the courts and others that perhaps some of the alphabetical departments are not really a part of the United States government.

WON MAIL VOTE PRIZE ON THE TOWN HALL PROGRAM

Listeners-in on "Town Hall" program last night were pleased to hear the announcement made by Fred Allen at the close of the program of last week's mail vote winner, being none other than Duane Harmon, the Cass county boy, who appeared on the previous week's program, but failed to place in the studio winners, who are chosen according to the volume of applause from the audience. The opportunity of having friends present in large numbers at the broadcast gives an advantage to performers living in or near New York, while the performer from distant points faces a stiff proposition so far as getting the applause of studio fans is concerned. However, there is a method of evening up, by allotting a separate prize on the mail vote. On Town Hall this prize amounts to $75 cash, and was won by young Harmon as a result of his large mail vote pouring in from all parts of the country.

Cass county friends contributed a goodly number of these votes, but no more than any other community having a contestant on the program, and the winning was due solely to preference for Harmon's number by the majority of Town Hall listeners-in all over the country.

We congratulate Duane on his fine showing and trust he may yet receive opportunity of appearing on the Major Bowes amateur hour broadcast on Sundays.

NIGHT CLUB MAN ARRESTED

Omaha.—Police early Monday arrested George "Dutch" Volker, 35, operator of the Clover Leaf club in downtown Omaha, on charges of violating a city ordinance prohibiting the serving of whisky after midnight. The arrest was made by Patrolman Bigge, who reported to Chief of Police Samardick that when he entered the club Volker shouted, "no rookie cop is going to prevent me from serving liquor to my friends."

Bigge stated that Volker then served drinks to two men. Volker said that while the city prohibits the sale of whisky after midnight until 6 a. m., he contended it does not prohibit the serving of liquor "on the house."
