NEBRASKA CITY PLANNING TAX FORECLOSURE SUITS

Wednesday's Nebraska City News-Press says: "The city took another step toward foreclosure on tax-delinquent property Monday night, when members of the commission tentatively approved a list which was turned over to City Attorney V. E. Tyler on which to begin proceedings.

"Mr. Tyler said there are two ways he may proceed: "1—The city may buy tax certificates and wait two years before foreclosing; "2—The city may foreclose now and wait two years to have the sale confirmed and buyers of the property placed in possession thereof.

"Mr. Tyler said several legal questions must be studied before he can start the action."

There, as here, much of the property consists of vacant lots and run-down houses which are of less value than the taxes against them, but the commission takes the same viewpoint as is held by the council here, that it is better to foreclose and sell them for what they will bring to people who will pay taxes on them in the future.

Plattsmouth is far ahead of our neighboring town with this program, however, as it chose the first plan of operation, whereby buyers get immediate possession, has practically completed one foreclosure suit involving 32 properties, has two more involving 30 properties almost ready to file, and holds tax certificates on a large number of others that must be let run two years from date of taking same before foreclosure can be started, if buyers are to get possession immediately. However, in the discretion of the city council, certificates may be held up to five years before being foreclosed, thus giving a wide leeway to home owners who really desire to pay their taxes but don't have the money to do so. It is thus possible under extenuating circumstances to withhold foreclosure until as much as seven or eight years' taxes have accumulated on property and still observe the strict letter of the law. No foreclosure is begun until five years are delinquent, and experience has proven few properties with that much tax unpaid are ever redeemed. On the other hand, if they are owned by non-occupying tenants or consist of rental business buildings, they are almost invariably let to run down, while the defaulting owner who should pay the taxes, collects the income for his own use.

For every dollar of tax revenue lost on these properties, other tax-paying citizens are obliged to make up the deficit through payment of a much larger sum than they would have to with all sharing the tax burden, and the sooner they can be sold to owners who will pay the tax, the sooner will taxes be reduced generally.
