Outbreak at Prison Feared, Says Eubank

May Have Been Reason for Removal of Harmon as Warden—Unanimous Vote of Board.

C. W. Eubank, member of the state board of control, said in an interview in reply to a direct question as to the reason for the removal of N. T. Harmon as warden of the Nebraska penitentiary, that fear of an outbreak at the prison may have contributed to the board's action.

When he announced removal of Harmon Monday, Eubank said all he was authorized by the board to say was that the action was for the best interests of the institution and the state. He added that the action was by an unanimous vote of the board.

A plot of several men to escape was foiled recently by the finding of hack saw blades in the men's cells. Joseph O'Grady, who succeeded Harmon as secretary of state pardon board, was appointed warden to replace Harmon and took charge Monday night.

Eubank said he thought no immediate action would be taken toward appointment of a superintendent of the state reformatory to replace A. W. "Gus" Miller, who died Monday night.

He thought Harry W. Jepersen, present deputy, would act as head of the reformatory for the time being.

The board of control met Tuesday to consider formulation of a statement with reference to the reasons N. T. Harmon was discharged as warden of the state penitentiary. He said the board might seek to set at rest rumors that were fitting about as to the board's reasons for Harmon's removal. Eubank however, declined to give any assurance the board would issue a statement.

Meanwhile the board of pardons was scheduled to meet in regular monthly meeting Wednesday, and members indicated a successor to O'Grady, the board's former secretary, might be selected.

Otto Dudschus, former deputy warden at the penitentiary, was reported a prominent candidate for the post. The board met Monday but Governor Cochran, its chairman, said that matter was not considered.

New Structure at Sherman, Texas, Will Be Monument to Great Fraternal Order.

The members of the local grove are very proud of the announcement that construction would begin immediately on a third building at the Woodmen Circle Home for orphan children and aged members near Sherman, Tex., was made following the board meeting of national directors at Omaha, Nebr. Board sessions, which have extended over the past two weeks, ended Saturday.

The building, which will house old people at the home, is to be known as the "Dora Alexander Talley" building, in honor of Dora Alexander Talley, Woodmen Circle national president. It is to be erected by the Texas membership of the society. Conferences with architects will be held within the next few days and construction will begin as soon as possible, it was announced.

Tentative plans call for accommodations for 50 old people in the new building. Individual living quarters will be provided for all. It is hoped to have the building completed early in June.

It was decided also by the directors to hold a Woodmen Circle "National Institute" in Omaha in 1937. Between 1,500 and 2,000 persons are expected to attend. The purpose of the "Institute" is to serve as a training school for leaders in the Woodmen Circle work.

The directors also discussed plans for three regional meetings to be held next year. These will last about five days and all members who have rendered outstanding service to the organization will be eligible to attend.
