Christian Church Members Complete a Worthy Work

New Basement to Church Completed After a Long Period and Serves a Long Felt Want.

Approximately six years ago someone walking past the First Christian church would have seen a group of men with picks and shovels slowly making a hole in the ground underneath the church building. They might have asked themselves the questions, "What is it, what will it be?" Then during the course of the next year or two they would see that hole enlarged to a basement dug under the church, but there the work stopped. Of course one could see a number of timbers in the basement for the purpose of holding up the floor or keeping the church from falling into the hole. Later on during the next year one could see a pile of coal in one corner and a pile of cord wood in the other corner, but other than that no sign of work or progress. What had happened? What had become of the men that had started the hole? Was it ever going to be finished, or would it remain thus, an unfinished work, a hindrance rather than a help to the church above it? If a person had gone past during the fourth or fifth year they might have seen some broken chairs, a discarded organ, some paint buckets left over from painting the church parsonage, and on Sunday afternoons of the all-day meetings children making mud pies or playing school in this so-called basement. Still wondering what is to become of the hole. Then during the sixth year the old lumber and discarded furniture slowly begins to disappear. The paint buckets are cleared away, and trucks from the lumber yard and sand pit begin to haul material to this hole in the ground. Are they finally going to do something? No it must not be true, not after they have waited all these years. Yet there seems to be an interest and the workmen have returned. Maybe it will become something yet. We will watch and see. Slowly the work progresses and the number of workmen increase. The floor is cemented, the old timbers are replaced by shiny new ones. The walls are plastered and the partitions are being built. An outside entrance and stairway is constructed. Oh well, they will work again for a short while and then will stop for another five or six years. But no! They seem to be in earnest this time. They are really putting forth an effort. Maybe I can help out. I'll ask and find out. Surely you can help. Come over any evening and help us, and if you can spare a dollar or two for us, all well and good. Then the hole in the ground is really going to be something after all. I will help them all I possibly can since I know they are going to have something good out of it. Finally all the rough work is finished and the final touches of trimming and painting arrive. There is an announcement in the daily paper of an open house program with a supper served in the basement of the First Christian church. People go to the supper and are greatly surprised that has been brought about in the "old hole in the ground." It is really a basement, and a good one too. Then on Sunday afternoon the dedicatory service is held with delegations from other churches in the state and one delegation from the neighboring state of Iowa. The basement is dedicated for the purpose which it was intended, the spread of the gospel of Jesus Christ to all people of the community.

The above is what might have been the version of the progress of the basement of the First Christian church from the viewpoint of some looker-on. Of course everyone realizes that it was not all as simple as might be taken from the above version, but that it took a great deal of hard, earnest work on the part of all members of the church and friends of the church in the community. It is the realization of a dream, or at least what was a dream six years ago. A great deal of credit is due to the building committee, to the ladies of the church, and to the people of the community who helped in some way toward the finishing of this work, started so long ago. Thank you all for your assistance in this worthy task.

Working on Hamburger Inn. E. A. Stock and brother were placing the siding on the front of the Hamburger Inn last Tuesday which has had only the boxing heretofore and this finishing on the building is adding much to the appearance of the place.

Visited in the West. Walter A. Cole who with the wife have been spending some two weeks in the west, returned home the latter portion of last week from Oshkosh where they have been visiting two of their daughters and their families. Ernest Olsen and Walter Olsen and their families. While away Mr. and Mrs. Cole enjoyed a very fine time. Mr. Cole reports things looking exceptionally fine in the west with a good prospect for a heavy wheat crop and with the grass knee high and the cattle fat, and in number uncountable. Mr. Cole said he never saw so many cattle and did not know they were there in such numbers. While away he was up north to the Niobrara river and tells of the great beauty of the country in that neighborhood. However they were pleased to get back to Weeping Water.

Removed Large Trees. The two large trees which have graced the main street of Weeping

Water near the harness and shoe shop of Lawrence Askew and the Cole garage have become a menace to the buildings and the safety of the pedestrians traversing the streets, so John Weicheldt and John Neill and Dean Spangler were engaged to remove them. The tree standing near the Askew shop was only a hollow tree trunk which was easily removed, but the other tree required a good deal of labor as well as skill to get it down without injuring the buildings alongside of them.
