Soon Time to Make State Fair Entries.

4-H club members who expect to enter exhibits at the state fair should be sure to take note that all livestock entries such as cattle, swine and sheep, must be in the Farm Bureau office by Tuesday, August 18th.

Many Trench Silos Being Dug.

A hurried survey throughout the county last week on the trench silo situation indicated that about 500 new trenches will soon be available for the burned corn crop.

The county commissioners have cooperated to the fullest extent in making equipment available to farmers for digging the trenches.

Hold 4-H Elimination Contests. Friday, August 7th, was a busy day at the Farm Bureau, as elimination contests for 4-H members trying out for the chance to represent Cass county in judging and health contests were held.

Eleven girls and two boys were entered in the county health contest. Miss Ruth Ann Sheldon of Nehawka scored the highest of the girls, while Ellis Schlichter, also of Nehawka, won in the boys' division.

Food, clothing, girls room and canning, judging contests were held, and the high ranking girls in each division, except girls room, were chosen to make up the teams to represent Cass county.

Washington—Possibility of transatlantic seaplane service between England and the United States before the end of the summer, recalls the rapid strides made in the field of passenger transportation recently.

south will catch less drifting snow than one dug east and west. A slope of about one foot for each four feet of depth is recommended for the side walls.

Where only a small number of livestock are to be fed the trench should not be too wide as this exposes a large face of silage when it is opened and it cannot be fed fast enough to keep it from drying out and spoiling.

An average field of fodder in Cass county will weigh out about 40 pounds of ensilage per cubic foot. In completing the filling of the silo it should be mounded up well and covered with four to six inches of dirt.

Many pastures are of such topography that they could not be plowed, and even though they were it would take lots of work to work them down to a good seed bed.

Questions and Answers on Handling Drouth Crops. Q. How about cane or sorghum as a silage crop?

A. Any of the canes or sorghums make just as good silage as corn. What has been said regarding corn also applies to these crops.

Q. Will the canes or sorghums be poisonous? A. If allowed to cure thoroughly in the field there will be no danger from feeding these canes or sorghums as fodder or hay.

Q. Can or should straw be added to green corn as it goes into the silo? A. The addition of straw to corn does not increase the feeding value of the corn whatever.

Q. Is it necessary to supplement silage with a dry roughage? A. The answer to this question is "No." We have fed cattle for a period of one year at the college with an average gain of 2.1 pounds per day for this period upon silage, corn and a protein concentrate.

Q. Will silage make a good horse feed? A. Good silage which contains no mold makes a very satisfactory feed for horses that are not working.

Q. Is it necessary to supplement silage with any other feed? A. It should be born in mind that all silage crops are extremely low in their protein content.

County Canning Contest. Saturday, August 22nd, has been set aside for the judging of exhibits entered in the Kerr canning contest.

This contest is open to any county woman over 21 years of age. The canned products are to have been canned since September 1935.

What Can Be Done with Old Pastures? What can be done with our pastures that have burned up is the question of the day.

What can be done with our pastures that have burned up is the question of the day. There are many ways of answering this question but the easiest and simplest way to get some feed from such pastures is to double disc them and seed 3 pecks of rye and 8 pounds of sweet clover, and five pounds of timothy or rye grass.

Earmers that followed this practice in August and September of 1934 all reported that they had abundant feed all fall of that year and the sweet clover and timothy lasted throughout the summer of 1935.
