While J. R. Mayfield was assisting in the installing of a pump in well at the home on the farm the pump slipped, catching one of the fingers of Mr. Mayfield and fracturing the bone as well as causing another finger to splinter slightly. The member is getting along nicely, but is still very painful.

Wm. Van Every, manager of the lower filling station, known as the Handy station has been nursing a number of boils. A cluster on his fore arm has made it very inconvenient for him to do his work at the station, as he finds something to hit the worst ones every little while. He however is getting over them some now.

Miss Agnes Rough has been enjoying a visit from a cousin, Mrs. E. A. Arensmeyer of New Albany, Indiana, who was guest for the past week and also was accompanied by the brother of Miss Agnes, Stuart Rough, who went to Iowa City on last Monday to take his daughter, Mrs. Ben Benson and two little daughters to their Iowa home where they are to begin school the first of the coming week.

Johnson has sought to get out and do something else where the chance of success is greater, and so offered his business for sale, which was purchased by Eugene Ludwig, who hails from Leshara, Nebraska. He will move the family to Weeping Water as soon as he is able to secure suitable place for a home, which he has promise of the coming week. Weeping Water welcomes the new blacksmith and his family.

Will Await Coming Fall. Ralph Keebler puts in the great majority of his time in hustling and hard work at the filling station. We noticed him hard at work this week when we were in town and asked him about his vacation. Ralph said: "Not until after the fair and the rush of business is over. But when the time comes and the fair is over and it is a little cooler, the wife and I, we always go together, will take our vacation. We have taken a number, have seen the Atlantic ocean, the Pacific ocean, the north and the south and there is only nine states we have not visited. When we go this fall we will start southeast and will see and travel through five of the remaining nine."

Return from the West. When John Cole and family were out west enjoying their vacation they left his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Cole, at Oshkosh, as guests of two daughters, Mesdames Qisen. Wins County Canning Contest. Mrs. Delbert Lindsay of Union won the county Kerr canning contest, exhibits for which were brought to the Farm Bureau office last week. The eliminations were made Saturday. Mrs. Dan Anderson of Nehawka placed second in the contest.

The exhibits each consisted of three uniform quart glass jars, one of fruit, one of non-acid vegetable, and one of meat.

Mrs. Lindsay's exhibit will now be entered in the state contest to be held during State Fair. The Kerr Manufacturing company, sponsors of the county, state and national contests, offer attractive prizes to the winners.

4-H Baby Bees and Hogs To Go to State Fair. Many entries have been received from Cass county club members for State Fair. 30 head of baby bees and 12 head of hogs will represent the county this year at State Fair.

Fifteen of the thirty baby bees are Galloways. Some of these boys have been feeding Galloways for a number of years and they say that considering the quality of feed and the hot weather these cattle are up to par with other years. Along with these fifteen Galloways, there have been eleven Hereford steers, two Hereford and one Shorthorn short fed heifers, and one Angus steer entered.

The twelve pigs that are entered are Chester Whites, Frances and Vincent Rehmeier of Weeping Water and George Oberle of Eagle are the club members making these entries. The pigs will be shown as individuals and also in the sow and litter class.

September 30th for Seeding Conserving Crops. The drought and grasshopper situation in the state has brought out a change in the fall seeding regulation. The date for seeding on summer fallow and on fields where green manure crops were plowed under before July 1st, has been changed from Sept. 1st to September 30th. Officials of the Northcentral Region state that they do not wish to require farmers to seed where it is impractical due to unfavorable conditions as the seed in all probability would be wasted. Farmers are urged to wait until seeding conditions are favorable.

4-H Baby Beef Club Picnic and Tour. The Blue Ribbon Baby Beef 4-H club, with James Schaefer as leader, held their annual picnic at Paul Wolph's home last Sunday afternoon. All of the parents were invited and the mothers brought well filled baskets for a picnic dinner. This dinner did not show any signs of a drought year as fried chicken and all other foods that go to make up a picnic dinner, including home made ice cream, were there in great abundance.

After the dinner a kittenball game was played, then the entire group made a tour, stopping at all the members' homes and inspecting the calves. This gave the club members a good opportunity to see how the other 4-H clubbers feed and manage their project and this may help them "Make the Best Better."

Emergency Rations for Milk Cows, Poultry. Two new circulars, designed to help the farmer with his feeding problems, have just been made available through the Extension Service. They are Circular 602, "Emergency Ration for Milk Cows," and Circular 1415, "Nebraska Emergency Mash Formula."

The feed situation is such that alfalfa hay will be high in price and in some cases not available, and corn will be costly. This changes materially the ordinary farm feeding of milk cows and the feeding plans suggested in the circular are not ideal, but are planned to meet the present drought emergency. Wheat straw, which has little feeding value for milk production, when used must be balanced by various grains and other concentrates. Corn silage, while not of the best quality, will be the chief source of roughage and other feeds should be added to the ration to balance it.

Look to Fall and Winter. This fall and winter sees a bigger change in dress and coat silhouettes than we've had for many a season. This year's dress silhouette is crisp, full-shouldered, flared. It is pleasingly different from the draped front fullness and the smooth shoulders of last year's frocks.

The tunic is one of the most popular of the new dresses. It has swirl and excitement in its lines. Then, there are gay and dashing boleros, side draped and apron frocks, the high waisted "Princess" line, peplums and basques, all of which are distinctly a part of this year's fashions.

This year's coat styles tend toward the high, slim-waisted, full-shouldered flared skirt line called "Princess." It is a result of the Empire influence in style. The slightly longer-than-fingertip-length overcoat that came out of Hollywood is very popular. The belted, flared skirt pirate coat, boxy swaggers, and flared-back, front-belted models are all important. Fur trims are more luxurious.

In hats, we find lots of variety. Generally, however, brighter colors and much more trimming are in evidence. All sorts of feather and pasted bird trims are new. Veils add considerable dash to some of the new fall felts. Among the plainer, more tailored hats, the high Postillion crown is popular. It certainly looks new. In fact, it seems a natural evolution from the Homburg in that it has the same clear cut tailored lines, and oftentimes a dashing quill stuck through at a youthful angle. The main difference is the new heightened crown. The off-the-face mode is still tremendously popular. Interesting variations and adaptations of this off-the-face line are showing up for the new season. One of the many favorites is a bonnet style... brimmed and set back to show the fair line. They have charm. The Breton sailors and little turbans will rank high in popularity. Brimmed hats with varied handling of the crowns and a new downward dip to the brim in back look refreshingly new.

Look to Your Diet. The widespread drought of 1936 has caused many farm families to face for the first time, the problem of purchasing for the least possible money a food supply that will maintain health, courage and working power. To do this without the home produced food of an average year and at the same time plan meals that insure palatability and a reasonable variety is no easy task. The size, ages and activities of various members of the family must be taken into consideration.

The Bureau of Home Economics submits the following minimum-cost adequate diet, which has been tried and found sufficient to maintain nutritional health over an indefinite period of time. Milk, to drink or in cooked food: 1 quart daily, for each young child; 1/2 of a quart daily, for each child over four; 1 pint for each adult. 4 Vegetables and fruits: From 3 to 4 servings per person daily. (The protective value of this group will be increased if fruits and also cabbage, spinach, carrots, and some other vegetables are frequently eaten raw); 8 to 9 servings a week of potatoes and sweet potatoes (once a day, sometimes twice); 2 to 3 servings a week of dried beans, peas, or peanuts; 2 to 3 servings a week of tomatoes (or of citrus fruits in season) for each adult and child over four; 4 tablespoons of tomato juice or 2 tablespoons of orange juice daily for each child under four; 5 to 6 servings a week of leafy, green, or yellow vegetables. 1 serving daily of fruit or an additional vegetable (including some leafy, green, or yellow kinds). Eggs: 2 to 3 a week for adults; 4 to 5 for young children; a few in cooking. Meat and fish: 3 to 4 times a week (more frequently if the meat dish is often a meat and cereal combination, so that the weekly meat allowance is not exceeded). A cereal dish once a day, sometimes twice. Bread at every meal; butter at some meals. Dessert about once a day if desired—such as cereal pudding, cookies, simple cake, shortcake, and inexpensive pastries and fruits. To meet all nutritional needs as cheaply as possible, this diet has a large quantity of cereal products and milk as its basis. Just enough of vegetables, fruits, eggs, and lean meats are used to supply vitamins, minerals, and protein not adequately furnished by bread and milk, and enough of fats and sweets are included to round out the calories. The choice among the different kinds of food is considerably limited by cost, and careful selection among the most

Wheat Smut Control. Smut causes an enormous loss to Nebraska farmers even though there is a practical, cheap and effective treatment available for its control. As wheat seeding time approaches, we should know that there are two kinds of smut which attack wheat, the covered, also known as the bunt or stinking smut, and the loose smut. The covered or stinking smut is the most serious smut in Nebraska. It not only reduces yields but affects the quality and grade of the crop. The covered smut is carried in smut balls or as spores on wheat kernels. Therefore the treatment of seed is necessary for its control. The two treatments commonly used are formaldehyde, and the copper carbonate treatments. The latter is usually used because it does not affect the germination by causing the seed to swell. The treatment consists of thoroughly dusting 2 to 3 ounces of copper carbonate over each bushel of wheat. This is about one fruit jar level full.

The effectiveness of this treatment depends upon the thoroughness of dusting the seed. A home made mixer can be used successfully. These mixers are made out of a 30 to 50 gallon steel barrel mounted diagonally on a shaft. The barrel has a tight lid on one end. When treating seed it should be done out of doors in a well ventilated place. The treated seed is regarded as poisonous and should not be fed or sold to mills or elevators. For the formaldehyde treatment, one pint of formaldehyde should be mixed with 40 gallons of water and this amount sprinkled over 40 bushels of grain, which is then covered for 5 to 6 hours with blankets, canvas, or sacks. The grain should then be seeded as soon as it is dry enough to pass thru the drill satisfactorily. The rate of seeding should be increased to take care of the swelling of the grain.

Loose smut is not so important in Nebraska and seed treatment does not help much in control. The best method is to get seed that is from a smut free field.
