

Quick to be Tried for Death of Woman

Hatfield Testifies That He Heard Argument But Was Afraid to Go to Kitchen.

Papillion, Neb.—George Quick of Bellevue was bound over to the district court here on a charge of second degree murder in connection with the death of Mrs. Lottie Hatfield of Bellevue last Aug. 2. He was held without bail.

Co. Atty. R. J. Nickerson presented only two witnesses at the hearing before County Judge Harvey A. Collins. William P. Nolan of Papillion, defense attorney, presented no testimony but questioned both state witnesses—Frank Hatfield, the victim's husband, and Dr. W. H. Betz. Hatfield testified that he and his wife returned home from a road house at Avery shortly after midnight Aug. 2 and retired. Later, he said, Quick, who lived at the Hatfield home in Bellevue, returned home and ordered Mrs. Hatfield to get up and get him something to eat.

His wife got up and went to the kitchen but he remained in bed. He heard Quick and his wife arguing, but because he was afraid of Quick did not go to the kitchen. The last thing he heard his wife say was "Oh, my."

Mrs. Hatfield's body was found next day and Dr. Betz said death was caused by a skull fracture. Nickerson introduced no testimony to show whether a weapon was used or if one was used, what it was.

Hatfield said he did not go near the kitchen until after his wife's body was found. He is a truck gardener at Papillion.

Nickerson said the case would be one of the first tried at the September term of court.

IODINE LOSES ITS STING

Dallas, Tex.—Pharmacy finally has taken the "burn" out of iodine. A new iodine compound, known in the pharmaceutical world as iodocholeate, a non-poisonous, non-injurious germicide, will be introduced to the American Pharmaceutical association convention Friday by Dr. Paul Goedrich of the New Jersey college of pharmacy research laboratories.

The germicidal power of the compound, he said, is up to 150 percent higher than ordinary iodine preparations and wounds treated with a solution made from the compound heal faster. More than 2,000 clinical cases confirm its properties, Dr. Goedrich said, adding: "Most important pharmacologic action of the iodocholeates is that it is not harmful to the broken or unbroken skin. Even when kept under heavy bandages."

SOUGHT SELASSIE'S RESCUE

Versailles, France.—An attempted rescue by airplane of Emperor Haile Selassie during the Italo-Ethiopian war was recounted in a French police court. Rene Drouillet, French pilot, was on trial on charges of violating air police regulations and misappropriating confiscated objects. It was on April 25 that Drouillet, who served as aviation adviser to the king of kings during the war, took off in his American airplane from Villacoublay airport for Ethiopia, but landed in Italy. He would have received the legion of honor instead of a trial, his lawyer told the court, "if he had succeeded in bringing the emperor to France."

Back in April Drouillet prepared his ship at the airport for the flight, but the air ministry kept it grounded, saying it lacked French registration. The daring pilot, however, with a court order in his pocket permitting a test flight, took off. He landed in Rome, and the plane was sequestered.

A warrant for his arrest was issued by the Versailles prosecutor's office, and he was arrested when he returned to France after the Italian occupation of Ethiopia was completed.

LEGION URGES GUN SALE LAW

The Nebraska American Legion Wednesday threw its weight behind the crusade to keep firearms out of the hands of the lawless.

The Legion, at the closing session of its department convention here, adopted a resolution urging its national headquarters, Governor R. L. Cochran and Nebraska state legislators to proceed toward adequate legislation for control of the purchase and sale of firearms.

A request that the federal government destroy all obsolete small firearms rather than sell them to brokers also was contained in the resolution.

Governor Cochran already has pledged himself to support a reasonable state law to end the promiscuous sale of firearms in Nebraska. Eleven of the 14 Omaha candidates for the one-house legislature also have pledged themselves to back a bill that will better regulate the sale of firearms.

Visited Old Time Home
Some 35 years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Penterman made their home in Auburn and since their removal from that town, Mrs. Penterman had not been back for even a brief visit. It happened that in the course of business, their son Morris, who is employed by the T. W. Engle Lumber company, found it necessary to go to the home office of the company in Auburn for lumber, and he was accompanied by his mother.

They found the town much the same although like many others it has been resting some, but just now is showing signs of improvement. Mrs. Penterman found one of the old time merchants occupying the same place he did when she resided there nearly two score years ago.

Death of William J. Hayes
William J. Hayes, for many years a resident of Elmwood and who with his parents were among the earliest settlers in Cass county, passed away at his home Monday evening, following a prolonged illness.

The family homesteaded on a farm east of town, where the deceased grew to manhood and spent the greater part of his life. Mr. Hayes was born January 25, 1866, near Pekin, Illinois. The farm on which he made his home with the parents, is the place where John Box now resides.

April 22, 1896, Mr. Hayes was united in marriage with Miss Leola Buck, who survives his passing. This union was blessed by the birth of two daughters, Mrs. Orville Wallick, who, with the husband make their home on the farm where the Hayes family resided for many years, and Mrs.

AAA Drops Plan to Send a Model Law to States

Attempt to Suggest Farm Legislation Meets With Criticism—Will Advise States on Request.

Washington.—An AAA spokesman said plans to submit standard soil conservation legislation to the states had been abandoned in an effort to nullify the charges that the administration was trying to dictate state laws.

Discussing the matter privately, the spokesman asserted federal agencies will advise with the states on request but otherwise maintain a "hands off" policy when they undertake to write laws enabling them to co-operate with the federal soil conservation act after Jan. 1, 1938.

That is the date set by law for the termination of direct grants from the government to farmers for soil conservation practices. Thereafter, grants will be made to states instead, on a state aid basis, when they adopt programs which the secretary of agriculture finds comply with the federal act.

At the AAA it was said the decision to leave the question of enabling legislation entirely to state initiative was reached when "inadvertent" distribution of a "model law" prospectus drafted by AAA attorney aroused adverse comment.

Dr. A. W. Gilbert, AAA counsel, in charge of state relations, and Prew Savoy, author of various "model laws" drafts, were absent from the city and colleagues declined comment.

It was said in official quarters, however, that the step was taken "for the express purpose of nullifying allegations that the administration was trying to dictate to the states."

It was recalled that Howard R. Tolley, AAA administrator, said in an address before the American Institute of Co-operation on June 19 that "many letters have been received in Washington asking for copies of a 'model state law.'"

"Presumably, it plans for controlling volume of productions are submitted by enough states to make a significant step toward attaining parity incomes for farmers, the secretary can approve them and advance funds to the states, and the states can make control of volume one of the conditions of grants to farmers," he added. "The various state plans must be co-ordinated so as to fit into a national pattern looking to the welfare of agriculture and the nation as a whole."
