RECUPERATING SLOWLY

Ed Bashus, of this city, who has been at the Veterans' hospital in Lincoln for several weeks, undergoing two bone operations at the hands of Dr. Orr, noted bone specialist of Lincoln, for removal of bone splinters from his left knee, caused by explosion of shrapnel during the war, was among the group of nearly 100 Veterans' hospital patients present at the state fair yesterday as guests of the fair board. Ed is recuperating slowly from the effects of his last operation and will be there several weeks yet. He was glad to meet the Plattsmouth comrades of the Legion, and said he would be looking forward to the arrival of Fred Lugsch at the hospital today.

Veterans' Day at State Fair a Great Success

Largest Crowd, Most Drum Corps and Bands and Best Speaking Program of Any to Date.

The Veterans' day program at the state fair on opening day (Sunday) was by far the most successful of any held to date. Credit for the outstanding success of this event is due Harry Jespersen, superintendent of the state reformatory at Lincoln and his committee of willing workers, including Nathan Grossman, also of Lincoln, who shaped up the program for this annual event. Grossman was in charge of bands and drum corps and did a splendid job of it.

By the time Governor Cochran began his opening address on the afternoon program, the stands were packed and there was an overflow crowd down in front. Other speakers included the department commanders of the G. A. R. Spanish War Vets, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Verne Taylor, newly elected commander of the Nebraska Legion; Ralph Vance, chairman of the state fair board, and Frank H. McFarland, Judge of the Circuit Court, Topeka, a past national vice commander of the American Legion and past commander of the Department of Kansas, who was the main event speaker of the afternoon. Prior to the speaking program, bands and drum corps to the number of nearly a score, paraded before the grand stand. The speaking program was followed by auto races.

Throughout the early part of the evening, following the rain, the various bands and drum corps played at various points about the grounds.

The one disappointing feature of the day was the fact that a muddy field prevented the holding of band and drum corps competition for cash prizes. At first it was decided to hold these events, but about 8 o'clock, when the contests were scheduled to start, additional rain definitely put an end to that part of the day's program, much to the disappointment of the various musical organizations, including the Plattsmouth Junior drum and bugle corps, that were on hand to participate.

It was estimated 20,000 people attended—a record opening day crowd for all the years the state fair has been in existence—and a goodly number of these were from Plattsmouth and Cass county.

Plans are being made to make Veterans' day at the fair next year an even bigger success than this year. The state fair board, sensing its popularity and crowd-attracting proclivities, is becoming more generous in its appropriation of prize and expense money to musical organizations attending, and this fact undoubtedly played a large part in the greatly increased attendance of this year.
