Water stood in the fields and in general the rain was the best that has visited over this section since the rains of the late spring season.

In this city the rain was registered at .36 of an inch.

More Corn-Hog Checks Received.

A total of $10,500 in final payments on 1935 corn-hog contracts has been received this week in addition to the $30,000 received a couple of weeks ago. Over 90% of the contracts have now been paid in full and a recent check-up reveals that there are 108 contracts on which the final payment has not been received. There is nothing wrong with these contracts and an urgent request has been sent the Washington office to speed payment of these few remaining contracts.

For the Well Dressed Woman. Accessory and Other Ideas

Did you ever stop to consider that the smartly dressed woman, who stands out in any crowd and who usually draws a second glance, has achieved her chic appearance by using good style sense in choosing her accessories, not forgetting to add a little dash of something original to her costume such as the following hints reveal.

Here are some new ways to wear artificial flowers: At your pocket; or spiked through your hat or on your purse! A smart well-dressed woman at a tea place, was observed wearing four little pink rosebuds along the top of a pocket on a white linen suit. A mass of them were worn at the front of the black band on her white hat also. This could be carried out on dark suit or frock. Then Schiaparelli, the famous French designer, conceived the idea of taking a long-stemmed rose or any other flower and sticking it through a hat band like a quill! An elderly woman in navy blue and white chose to wear a bunch of lilies-of-the-valley at her throat and another spray pinned to her navy blue purse.

Try keying colors to one's hair and eyes. Contrasting or complementary colors (opposite on the color wheel) intensify each other. Dark colors bring out blonde hair. Repeating a color will enhance it. For example: Pick up the color of blue eyes in blue of blouse or blue accessory.

The idea of using bright fabrics for accessory combinations is a popular one. Scarf and sash sets are good now and will carry over for late fall and winter. Make up some in vivid silk shantung or printed silk crepe. Or for sports, Desert Cloth in vibrant new colors would work up interestingly. Either make a long narrow scarf which may also be wrapped around your head on occasion, or make a triangular one which may be tied around your head with a double knot in front. Then make a long sash in matching material and color. Colorful sashes make one of the most popular trims for dark dresses.

A delicately cool cluster of flowers make a crisp contrast with dark autumn things and may be crocheted or tatted. Some of the smartest shops carry Irish crocheted white blossoms, stiffly starched and having yellow centers.

A new use for rick-rack braid: Stitch rows of plain and contrasting colored rick-rack together for collars or for vestees with your suit.

Prepare to Treat Bindweed Now. During September and the first part of October, many farmers will be applying sodium chlorate to bindweed with the expectation of eradicating the pest. Now is the time for a little preliminary work in preparation for chemical treatment. If the plot to be treated has a heavy growth of weeds, it should be mowed and burned as soon as it is dry. Where a small amount of vegetation is present it may be sufficient to disc the surface thoroughly or in some cases plow the ground. By destroying the excess vegetation, the chlorate will be more effective on the bindweeds which will group again after the other weeds have been burned or otherwise destroyed. The bindweed will make considerable growth within ten days or two weeks and if the chlorate is applied then it will prove most effective.

Good rains will put the ground in better condition for the treatment of bindweed patches, as sodium chlorate needs a moist soil to give the highest percent of kill.

Broadcasting by hand, the dry chlorate is as effective as using it in solution and is also less dangerous when applied dry. About three pounds of sodium chlorate per square rod is sufficient for one application. Where large areas are infested it will prove more economical to practice clean cultivation for two years.

Poultry Graded

We are buying poultry on grade according to the regulations of the Department of Agriculture. Now do not get alarmed about this grade, for it is made with the intention of paying the one who produces good quality Poultry more money than can be paid for poor quality.

Anyone who is not buying on this grade will, I believe, have to pay from 3 to 5 cents lower than our price for top stuff.

Where we are finding most of the No. 2 poultry is poultry that is thin on the breast; poultry with a crooked breast bone, swollen eyes, rupe, etc., but the two main troubles that cause poultry to be graded No. 2 are thin breast and crooked breast bone. You will find these in both Springs and Hens.

A large percent of the thin breast-poultry can be held back and fed a while longer, so that most of it will reduce into No. 1 poultry.

A reduction of 5c per pound will be made for No. 2 poultry, but we are finding a very small percent of No. 2 poultry just now.

Prices quoted above are not good for Jersey Giants. An effort is being made to discriminate against all Jersey Giants. Whether or not this will be permanent, I cannot tell just yet. If you have Jersey Giants to sell and wish to market them through my company, it would be best to see me before bringing them in, so there will be no misunderstandings.

I Will be Glad to Handle Your Eggs and Cream at Top Cash Prices!

Places Second in State Canning Contest.

Mrs. Delbert Lindsay of Union, who won the Cass county Kerr canning contest, this week placed second in the state contest being held in connection with the State Fair. This award entitles her to a trip to Mothers' Vacation Camp in the summer of 1937, not to exceed $5.00. This is a very fine recognition for Mrs. Lindsay and speaks well for her canning ability.

What Variety of Wheat Shall We Plant?

Nebraska farmers are becoming "variety conscious" as they go about making plans for seeding their 1937 winter wheat crop. Everywhere they are talking more about wheat varieties in view of the damaging toll taken from crops of previous years by lodging, rust, sudden heat and the wide difference in varieties.

Two winter wheats are recognized as superior in Nebraska. One in Nebraska 60, a good Turkey selection of special value because of its superior winter-hardiness. The other is Cheyenne, commonly referred to as the Winter Wheat of the Day. The Cheyenne variety is inherently high yielding and matures several days earlier than Nebraska 60. Because of its shorter and stiffer straw, it stands up better than any other hard

There will be no "fly-free dates for winter wheat seeding announced for Cass county this year. Hessian fly population is small and no damage to newly seeded wheat is anticipated. Such was the information received this week from M. H. Swenk, chairman of the entomology department at the Nebraska college of agriculture. Farmers are advised that they may safely disregard the hessian fly this year as a serious factor in wheat seeding. The dry weather during the past few years has greatly reduced the hessian fly population and as a result the last four wheat crops have had but little hessian fly in them.

wheat. Even after ripening, the head continues to stand erect and unless given severe wind treatment will not shatter. It is the best combine variety. Its fall and early spring growth excel that of most hard winter wheats. Since it begins aggressive growth and root development early in the spring, it frequently gains an advantage over most other varieties in number of productive stems, and in drought periods the plants are less apt to be injured.

Cheyenne, however, rusts like other varieties, as farmers have found. It is one of the outstanding wheats for giving high, consistent production in Nebraska. For eight years Cheyenne has led the field in average production, at the Nebraska Experiment Station, with a yield of 36.7 bushels as compared with 32.3 bushels for Nebraska 60.

Call or write the Farm Bureau office for information as to growers of Cheyenne wheat in this county.

What Shall We Put In the Lunch Box?

The opening of school again brings back the old problem of what to pack in the children's lunch box. While mother's vacation from packing nourishing and tasty lunches is ended, this task may not be the chore that it often seems if a little thought is given beforehand.

The three requirements of a school lunch are proper balance, pleasing taste and appearance, and careful packing so that the food is in good condition when noon time arrives. The thermos bottle takes care of the so-much-to-be desired cup of hot cocoa, or soup, while small screw-top jars or waxed paper containers make possible generous portions of salad, apple sauce and the like.

Sandwiches will always occupy the major space in a lunch box and it is to these that we want to pay particular attention. Fillings that are easy to make include cottage cheese, cream cheese, eggs, fish, meat or chicken, nuts and fruit. The protein part of the meal is provided in the meat, eggs or cheese sandwiches, while the nut and fruit combinations supply the youngsters' natural craving for sweets and make unnecessary the usual cake or cookies. Fruits of course always have a place in the well-balanced packed lunch.

Extension Circular 980 "Sandwich Suggestions," and Circular 990, "The School Lunch," were written especially to assist mothers confronted with such problems as the school lunch and anyone desiring copies of them may obtain them at the Farm Bureau office.

Hessian Fly Infestation Low.

There will be no "fly-free dates for winter wheat seeding announced for Cass county this year. Hessian fly population is small and no damage to newly seeded wheat is anticipated. Such was the information received this week from M. H. Swenk, chairman of the entomology department at the Nebraska college of agriculture. Farmers are advised that they may safely disregard the hessian fly this year as a serious factor in wheat seeding. The dry weather during the past few years has greatly reduced the hessian fly population and as a result the last four wheat crops have had but little hessian fly in them.

A survey last June showed but slight infestation in Nebraska. The average was highest in the southeastern section but there only about one stem out of 100 was infested. As a result Swenk sees no need for late sowing this year to avoid hessian fly.
