The Evils of Intemperance
By IRVIN S. COBB

A CERTAIN newspaper proprietor in New York who always was—and still is, even in these prohibition days, a total abstainer—dropped into the office just before press time, and found the assistant managing-editor in charge.

"Where's Blank?" he asked naming the managing editor. "Of on one of those periodical tears of his," answered the assistant.

"Where's the city-editor?"

"Pied—down in Andy Horn's."

"I didn't see the make-up editor as I came through the composing-room. What's become of him?"

"He's in a Turkish bath over in Brooklyn getting a bun boiled out of him."

The proprietor dropped into a chair, shaking his head sadly. "Well," he said, "for a person who never touches a drop I seem to suffer more from the effects of drunkenness than any other man in this town."
