Sale of Farms and Ranches Has Set a New High

Federal Land Bank of Omaha Shows New High for the Year 1936 as Conditions Improve.

Omaha.—Climaxed by a marked upturn in the last months of the year, the sale of farms and ranches by the Federal Land bank of Omaha reached an all-time high in 1936, Charles McCumsey, president, reported to the bank's board of directors Wednesday.

Chalking up 62 sales for over $419,000 in Nebraska, the land bank wound up the year with its total sales numbering 468 for consideration amounting to more than $2,592,000—a new record in the bank's 29-year history.

The bank operates in Nebraska, South Dakota, Wyoming and Iowa.

Substantial down payments featured the year's sales, the bank president reported. While the bank makes sales on down payments as low as 20 per cent, cash anticipated before possession averaged 33 per cent of the purchase price on the 1936 sales.

"Whatever depressing effect the 1936 drought may have had on the farm and ranch real estate market was more than offset by higher prices for agricultural products," said McCumsey. "The most heartening thing evidenced by the Federal Land bank's 1936 sales is the eagerness to buy that is shown by the people who want farms and ranches as homes for themselves. Fully three-fourths of those buying from the land bank were farmers and tenants, buying to make homes."

OCCUPATION TAXES FOUGHT

The most forceful warning to the council to date came Tuesday from Solon Burkhardt, general manager of the Duld Packing company plant here, who said the tax, if levied, might interfere with the company's plans for improvements costing $400,000. The warning was repeated by E. S. Waterbury, Armour & Co., general manager here, who said he believed levying of the tax would put about 22 men out of work here, and might interfere with the company's plans to spend 1 million dollars for improvements.
