BACK to his former home in North Carolina returned a colored cosmopolitan. For two years he had been touring the country with a street fair and carnival company. So now he bore himself as a traveled person, familiar with all far corners of the universe.

He stood on the principal corner of the colored residential section, recommending himself to an admiring—and envious—audience of old associates.

"Yas, suh," he proclaimed, "I done rid on ever' railroad in dese whole United States. Does you crave for me to prove it? All right then, one of you little niggers jes call off de letters—de initials—of any railroad, big ur little, an' right away I'll tell you de full name of dat road."

A white citizen who overheard the boast drew near. Unobserved by the braggart, he began prompting one of the other darkies. "I. C.," began the white man's accomplice.

"Illinois Central!" answered the traveler. "D. & R. G."

"Denver an' Rio Grandy," rattled off the sophisticate. A murmur of applause arose from the ring of listeners.

"A. T. & S. F."

"Atchison, Topeka an' Santy Fay—that's whut." The signs of approval increased in volume.

"C. B. & Q."

The traveler blinked. For just the fraction of a second he hesitated. Then inspiration came to him:

"Chicago, Boston an' Cuba!" he shouted.

CHAPTER X

"How did my photographs turn out?" asked John, as he seated himself in the dental chair.

"Your photographs?" asked Dr. Young, "you mean your roentgenograms?"

John looked slightly abashed: "All right, doctor, you win. I've called some of my photographs worse names than that, but I did not expect to hear it from you."

"Roentgenograms is the proper name for pictures made by X-rays," laughed the doctor. "X-rays were first discovered by Dr. Roentgen, a professor of physics at Wurzburg, Bavaria, in 1895. Since then, many wonderful improvements have been made in their production and use. But he was the man who gave humanity this great gift. I told you last week how the X-rays could penetrate your tissues and leave shadow pictures on the films."

"I remember," replied John, "what kind of shadow pictures did mine turn out to be?"

"Let's look at them together," suggested the dentist, as he selected Mr. Reynolds' X-ray mounts from his files and inserted them in his reading lamp.

John looked long and carefully at the fourteen shadow negatives before him. Finally he said, "I guess you will have to act as interpreter, me as some of the labels we see on foreign merchandise. I can't decipher them. Anything wrong?"

"Yes, replied Dr. Young, "there is." Holding up the picture showing two of John's upper molar teeth, he pointed with his instrument to two small dark spots on the teeth.

"Do you see those two spots?" he asked. John nodded his head. "Did you ever have any pain in your upper right molars?"

"Never," replied John. "I thought my teeth were as solid as rocks."

"They look as though they were," said Dr. Young. "But the X-rays show that cavities have started to form in two of them. One of the cavities is quite large. The other is apparently small. They were caused primarily by food lodging and decomposing between the two teeth."

"I'm saying that you have not brushed your teeth—you probably have—but small particles of food become wedged between your teeth and you could not remove these particles with your brush. In time, the food decomposed and was probably a factor in causing this decay."

"That's strange," said John. "I thought that when teeth decayed they always ached."

"Not always," replied Dr. Young. "They usually ache, but sometimes they will decay almost to the pulp or nerve before any pain is felt. That is the reason why it is advisable to have your teeth X-rayed at least every two years. The X-rays assist in discovering small hidden cavities before they become large and bore the pulp or nerve becomes infected. You would have run up here with a severe toothache—which would have been too bad. What is worse, I would have had to remove the pulp, or nerve, from the teeth, or possibly extract them. A vital tooth is better than a devitalized one."

"That's just common sense," replied John. "We don't want any crippled help around the office, and I'd rather not have any in my mouth."

from Weeping Water, Pinochle was featured and there was plenty of keen competition for honors. A fine outfit was offered as a prize in a guessing contest, being won by Joseph Wolpert.

Visited in Shenandoah Joseph Wolpert and his sisters, Misses Katie and Maggie, were in Shenandoah, Iowa, last Wednesday, where they were looking after business matters and taking in the sights of the town. They delayed starting home until quite late and were caught in the rain.

SUES ON BANK STOCK The department of banking of the state of Nebraska has filed an action in the office of the clerk of the district court in which the department is seeking to recover stockholders liability in the failed Bank of Union.

While the larger part of the stockholders have made payments on their shares of stock under the double liability law, there are several who have not as yet made settlement and the action is against these stockholders.

Successful Card Party The ladies of St. Patrick's church gave a very pleasant card party at the Manley hall last Monday, which was attended by a large number of people of this vicinity as well as Club Week Soon. Merle Evelyn Eveland of Elmwood, Robert Wagoner of Cedar Creek, and Virginia Pollard of Nehawka, outstanding 4-H club members of Cass county, have been awarded trips to Nebraska's annual 4-H Club Week to be held at the Nebraska college of agriculture, May 31-June 5.

Prize trip winners from all parts of the state totalling about 400 boys and girls together with local leaders will attend the annual event. In addition many 4-H clubs are planning on sending their own delegates.

Recreational and educational sessions will again feature the 1937 Club Week. Banquets, dinners and picnics are planned. Visits will be made to interesting places in Lincoln and the Club Week will wind up with the annual trip to Omaha by special train.

"Dressing Up" Food. "Altho there is no substitute for 'right down good cooking,' dressing up food puts the coax into it," said Miss Leta Lynch in addressing a group of Nebraska farm women. Attractive dishes, sparkling crystal, clean linen, and the discriminative use of color, give a meal "that extra touch" which does much in making foods tempting and irresistible.

Miss Lynch suggested that every homemaker should have (1) a pantry make up box in which the last minute extras are assembled, such as chocolate stars, nuts, decorative candies, etc; (2) a scrapbook of colored illustrations of dishes which will help in varying menus, and to give a mental picture of meals before serving them.

Handy Garden Bulletin Available. "Subsistence Farm Gardens," is the title of U. S. Department of Agriculture bulletin number 1746, copies of which have recently been received at the Farm Bureau office. This bulletin takes up all phases of gardening, including vegetables and fruits. It contains suggestions for cultural practices, disease and insect problems, with formulas for sprays, dusts, etc. It takes up potatoes, tomatoes, onions, peas, lettuce, carrots, beets and many other vegetables such as squashes and pumpkins, melons, sweet corn, and fruits such as raspberries, blackberries, dewberries, grapes, apples, pears, plums and cherries.

Anyone interested in obtaining a copy of this bulletin should make their request at the Farm Bureau office.

4-H Hybrid Club Organizes. LeRoy Cook of Elmwood was elected leader by a group of eight boys in the Murdock vicinity last Thursday evening, when they met at the Frank Buell home and organized a hybrid corn club.

The agricultural agent gave each boy a seven pound sample of hybrid corn for his project. The members of the club are Wendell Cook, Stuart Mills, Erwin Schlaphoff, Silas Schlaphoff, Warren Rikil, Neil McCrory and James Mills.

Diet Is Cornerstone of Child Health. May Day, for the child, means hanging May baskets and scampering away before he is caught. For the youth it often means dancing around the Maypole and crowning a fair queen. But for an increasing number of their elders it means Child Health Day.

As President Roosevelt said in his proclamation, May 1 is a day for special consideration of ways in which the health of children shall be promoted and safeguarded.

Health obviously can be built upon a well-balanced diet. And it's pretty difficult, though not impossible, to work out a well-balanced diet for growing children without milk.

Milk does not contain all the essential food elements, but it provides many of them—and very cheaply. Give a child all the milk he wants to drink, providing he does not let it displace other essential foods. Every child should get a pint a day and if possible a quart, to arm him against a number of diseases traceable to a deficiency of vitamins A, B, and G. Citrus fruits or tomatoes, the leafy green vegetables, and eggs also should be in the diet to supply needed vitamins and minerals and supplement the milk.

Grasshoppers Reported Hatching. Herman Kupke of Murdock reported at the Farm Bureau last Friday that the "hoppers" were hatching on his farm. Two other indirect reports came in the same day.

The agent inspected several farms in the vicinity of Weeping Water earlier in the week but did not find any young "hoppers. However, many eggs were found and from their appearance the general hatching season will start any time if the weather stays warm.

The field inspection showed that the "hoppers" had laid their eggs not generally over the farms as many people think, but rather in definite areas. These areas in general are hard ground such as lanes, old roads, paths, ditch banks, some fence rows and similar places. Altho only a few farms were visited, no eggs could be found in old alfalfa fields. Where eggs were found they were in great numbers, one spade of dirt having two to five egg pods in it. The average egg pod is about one and a quarter inches long and about one-half inch in diameter, containing about four hundred small yellow eggs.

Should this expected infestation develop, farmers should keep a close watch about their farms to locate the hatching beds. The little hoppers will stay in these hatching beds about two weeks after they hatch, before they move into other fields.

A hundred pounds of poison mash will do more good when spread in the hatching beds than a ton will do late in the season. Cold rainy weather throughout the hatching season which should be in the next three weeks, will help a great deal in controlling the pest.

Attend Omaha Meeting. Sheriff Homer Sylvester and Deputy Sheriff Cass Sylvester were at Omaha Thursday evening where they attended the dinner party given by the Independent Grocers of Omaha, which was held at the Blackstone hotel.

The sheriff and deputy were honor guests and an appreciation of their fine work in the recent capture of the two bad men from New York and the Cass county officers were the center of interest to all of the dinner party.

Eagle Poultry Club Organizes for 10th Year.

Robert Wall, 4-H member and leader, is again leading the poultry club of Eagle. The club was first organized in 1928. Since that time many boys and girls have enrolled in the poultry club and become outstanding members.

Two of the former members, Maize Foreman and James Wall, were state champion 4-H club members and received trips to Washington, D. C. The club has also developed many outstanding demonstration and judging teams.

At the organization meeting last week the leader discussed the feed situation and told the members that it took about twenty-five pounds of feed to produce a pullet to laying age. With feed costing 3.8 cents a pound, this would be a ninety-five cent pullet while the University all-purpose formula could be mixed at about 2.4c per pound which would make the pullet's feed cost amount to about sixty cents.
