LOOKING IN ON THE Famous Dionne Quins

Copyrighted article by the Quaker Oats Company

Quins Like Music

Some day perhaps the world will tune in their radio sets to listen to the famous Dionne orchestra. Although only a few months past three years of age, the Quins are showing strong musical tendencies. Annette shows a weakness for the harmonica and is a good "hummer." Emilie likes to strike a single note on the piano and listen attentively to its reverberation, while Marie prefers to pound the keys noisily. Cecile will no doubt be the Quins' vocal soloist, as she was the first to memorize successfully a complete song. Yvonne expresses interest chiefly in toy musical instruments, such as the miniature trombone, saxophone, accordion or trumpet. Perhaps, some day, the Dionne babies will be known as the Dionne Musical Quintette.

That these famous Quins will be successful in whatever they undertake seems assured, since they are every day being taught the first lessons for success—the importance of proper rest, exercise and proper food. Oatmeal, rich in Vitamin B, is given the Quins every day by their medical advisors as a safeguard against nervousness, constipation and poor appetite and to provide the abundance of minerals, protein and carbohydrates for making strong bodies, muscles and energy. Visitors who have called on the Quins this summer from all parts of the globe agree they are in perfect condition and the "pink" of health.

(Other interesting stories on the life of the Quins will follow.)

Parker, was sold by him to Raymond Bramblett Friday of last week. Mr. Bramblett took the business over immediately and has been conducting it since. The new proprietor is very well pleased with his new acquisition.
