Wabash News Greenwood

Robert Henson was sawing wood last week for Lincoln Hunt.

Lester Bosworth was in Omaha last Friday morning, going to transport business.

William Rueter shelled corn for E. F. Marshall Monday and found the grain in good condition for shelling despite the earliness of the season.

Henry H. Gerbeling who now has considerable of his corn in the crib, says the yield is very fair, considering the prolonged drouth of the past summer.

L. R. Stanley was busy last week hauling wood from his timber plat to the three places in town—the store, his home and that of Sherman Hardaway.

Glen Cowperwaite and family, who formerly resided at Waverly, but of late have lived in Elmwood, moved to Wabash last week.

P. H. Clarke has his fall wheat all sown and most of it is up and doing nicely following the recent light rainfall.

William Murfin has been picking corn for Fred Towle, finding the yield only fair, but good when one takes into consideration the drouth and hot winds which stunted growth at the most important time of the season.

Markets Much New Corn

E. F. Marshall, who lives in Weeping Water, has gotten along pretty well with the task of picking corn on the farm, and last week shelled some 700 bushels of this year's crop.

SCHOOLS TEST NEW FOOTBALL SAFETY RULES

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UP)—New regulations permitting unlimited substitutions and providing for 20-minute intermissions and warmup periods between halves are being tried by Michigan high school coaches in an effort to minimize injury hazards for football players.

The substitution ruling, which stipulates only that a player may not return to the game until after the completion of one play, is intended particularly to provide relief for tired or injured players.

A lengthened intermission and a required three-minute warmup period before start of the third quarter were approved after a survey indicated players were most susceptible to injury before they became limbered sufficiently for play.

"Michigan is the first state to adopt a 20-minute intermission to allow longer rest, and to permit unlimited substitution during an entire game," Charles Forsythe, Michigan high school athletic association director, said.

Coaches also adopted a regulation barring persons and equipment from within five yards of sidelines to safeguard players further from possibility of injury.
