

MONGREL, ALOOF IN LONG, FREE LIFE AT PRISON

LANSING, Kas., (UP)—Fifteen years ago a mongrel pup wandered up to the gates of the Kansas State prison here. A team of horses, pulling a wagon, emerged and the pup elected to follow them.

Today, the dog still accompanies the horses everywhere. It sleeps with them in their stalls at the prison barn. The dog is blind in one eye now, badly scarred from numerous fights and has acquired the name of Peedie.

Peedie is old and rheumatic and can't trot with the horses, but he goes on trips with them, anyway. The dog rides in the driver's seat.

Peedie is not like other dogs. He doesn't mingle with the dogs which wait for release of their convict masters outside the gates and he keeps them from coming near the horses. Peedie used to be self-sustaining, rustling his own food, but he's too old for that now and is fed with scraps from the prison dining room.

PLAN EARLY TRIP TO INSPECT NEW PAVING

For some time plans have been considered for a trip by Mayor Lushinsky, some members of the council and interested parties to view the laying of the new low priced rock-bound macadam or "pea soup" type of paving being laid in both Tecumseh and Nebraska City. After several delays, it is expected definite arrangements for the trip as guests of the Portland Cement association representative in this territory, will be concluded at Monday night's meeting of the council.

This type of paving, laid with WPA labor and material costs borne by property owners, cost much less than that laid under straight contract jobs in the old manner, and is said to be equal in every way if not superior. It consists of wet mix concrete poured over a crushed rock base and then "vibrated" to fill all the voids. The resultant slab is approximately eight inches in thickness and test cores prove a closer texture concrete than non-vibrated cores.

There are some property owners in Plattsmouth who would like to have paving in front of their properties and any such who might desire to go to Tecumseh or Nebraska City to inspect it being laid, should communicate with Mayor Lushinsky at once.

Tecumseh is now on its third contract, involving a total of some 65 blocks, we are told. Nebraska City is also preparing to let its second contract for a much lesser amount.

A TRIBUTE

Plattsmouth, Nebr., October 7, 1937.

On returning home to our little city after an absence of over thirty days, I missed a familiar and well loved figure from our streets, and am told that Dr. T. P. Livingston has gone away to respond to his last call, and I cannot help feeling lonely. A long time, and highly valued friendship prompts a personal tribute to this good and useful citizen.

For more than half a century Dr. Livingston with medicine case in hand has daily and nightly traveled along the streets and over the hills of our city in response to calls to alleviate suffering. No night has been too dark, no days has been too bleak, or stormy; no home too humble to deter him from answering calls of distress. In answer to such calls he has crossed the threshold of nearly every home in Plattsmouth, and continued faithful to the responsibility assumed, as long as medical skill could avail. It is a well known fact that he rarely, if ever presented a bill for his services, and by giving his time, skill and actual money value in surrender of fees dearly earned, he has contributed to the community more worthy charity than any other person or association; and never complained. He may have had some weaknesses and faults—so have we all. We all well know that absolute perfection is no heritage of human kind, but let us hope and believe, we DO hope and believe that the Great Divine Chemist who with infinite love so accurately sifts the gold from the dross of human life, found an abundance of gold in the life of Dr. T. P. Livingston to be assembled into a crown of glory, and that he rests in peace in that Realm where there is no suffering or pain. A FRIEND.

CORN YIELDS GOOD

Early corn shucking reports indicate that a great many fields are going to yield approximately 30 bushels of corn per acre. Think of the crops of the last few years and the condition existing farther west in the state and be thankful for the good yield being received here.

Cass County Corn Shucking Contest Oct. 19

Corn Picking Classic Will Be Staged at the Farm of Elbert Wiles Near This City.

Thursday afternoon a committee composed of E. F. Parker, Weeping Water, Herbert Oehlerking and Ralph Krause, of Elmwood, were here to complete the arrangements for the Cass county corn shucking contest. The committee found the yield much better in this section and accordingly decided that the contest could best be held at one of the farms near Plattsmouth.

The farm of Elbert Wiles was secured for the purpose and the date of the shucking match set for Tuesday, October 19th.

There will be ten contestants in the race for the title of the Cass county champion and who will represent this county at the state meet to be held near Kearney.

The selections will be made from the first ten who make application at the office of County Agent D. D. Waincoat at Weeping Water.

The committee will arrange for judges for the event and also wagons to be used by the shuckers in their snapping corn.

The committee also took the matter up with officers of the Plattsmouth Business Men's Ad club relative to prizes for the shuckers, and this organization of business men will plan some trophies to be awarded the winners.

It is expected that the event will draw a large number from all sections of Cass and adjoining counties to witness the battle of the corn experts.
