Road and Bridge Progressing.

County Commissioner E. B. Chapman of Union was a visitor in Nehawka last Monday morning and was looking after some business matters for the county and seeing that the new bridge which is being constructed over the branch of the Weeping Water creek north of town was progressing. Just at this time the workmen are driving piles and will soon be constructing the bridge proper which is two times as long as the one it is replacing and some ten feet higher with high approaches which it is estimated will carry the water even from the most severe of rain storms, thus insuring a good road from Nehawka from the north which has been a source of much trouble in the past when high water came.

When This Old Town Was New.

Yes that was about fifty years ago, The Missouri Pacific railroad was extended from Union, to Lincoln and was graded and was serving as has intended during the half hundred years it has run into Nehawka, and the new town was being laid out. Andrew F. Sturm, who was born on the old homestead north of town, concluded to engage in the lumber business and had a number of car loads of lumber shipped here and unloaded on the side of the road, which lumber was used in building the first houses in the city. The Sheldon store was built from the lumber which was unloaded along the track as there was then no place to store it. During the busy winter of 1876 and '77 Mr. Sturm was very busy with the shipping in of lumber to supply the demand and at the same time was building sheds for his lumber yard and which he has continued during the fifty years. He also constructed an elevator. He was here all the time to supply the needs of the rapidly growing town of Nehawka and to care for the business which came from the surrounding country. Jacob Wessell, now a prosperous farmer, did the hauling of the stone used in the building of the foundation for the Sheldon store. The Sheldon store was opened on April 6th, 1888, the first books being opened by Lawson Sheldon, this institution had continued since and its the second longest and continuous business in Nehawka, the business of Mr. A. F. Sturm being the oldest and one which has continued during the years. Henry Wessell joined the Sheldon store after the first year, and worked for the firm after 1889 and later entered business for himself which he continued for many years. The Steffens store was established later by King David Clarke and later disposed of to D. Steffens and finally was acquired by J. H. Steffens. Olaf Lundberg came to Nehawka and engaged in business in 1914 in the small building where the Enterprise printing office now is and in 1917 purchased the location where he is now and has continued business there ever since.

Returned from the South.

Stuart Rough, who has a daughter in Alvin, Texas, has been visiting there for the past three weeks, and was accompanied by R. C. Deles Dernier. They returned home late last week, well pleased with their visit, but glad to get back to the home town.

Getting on Nicely Now.

They made their last trip Monday of this week when the doctor dismissed Mr. Kruger as cured and they returned home well pleased that the treatments were over.

Visiting in Illinois.

Substitute Back of Huskers Has Proven Real Scoring Machine, Saved Two Contests.

LINCOLN, Oct. 27 (UP)—University of Nebraska football fans have been thankful more than once this fall for the "explosion" runs of a little, substitute Husker halfback named Marvin Plock.

Marvin may be small—he is 5 feet 7½ inches tall and weighs 155 pounds—but he is durable and what is more important, he has speed and agility. Ask Iowa State and Missouri. He saved the Iowa State game for the Huskers after Nebraska followers virtually had resigned themselves to a 7 to 7 tie.

Playing safety, Marv took a punt in the final quarter and raced 72 yards through the entire Cyclone eleven. He made life miserable all afternoon for the Iowa State ends by his punt returns and excursions around end.

Against Missouri last week, Plock snared Phelps' bullet pass for the Cornhuskers' only touchdown. Not content with that contribution, he booted the extra point. Now he ranks second in the individual Big Six conference scoring race with 13 points.

Marvin says he developed much of that speed and drive from carrying a newspaper route for two years before he entered Lincoln high school. Pedaling a bicycle strengthened his leg muscles. At Lincoln high, he won letters in four sports and was a sprinter on the track team.

The Missouri game furnished a novel experience for Plock. He came out of this contest with his first gridiron injury of any consequence. It was a bruised muscle just above the left knee, an injury similar to one that has kept Johnny Howell, veteran quarterback, on the bench.

Not caring to take any chances with his leading scorer, Coach Biff Jones sent Plock to the university infirmary after the squad returned from Missouri Sunday. He was released yesterday.

Plock's ability to twist away from tacklers, his fleetness and small, compact build causes some fans to compare him with Chris Mathis, the "rabbit back" who thrilled fans several years ago.

Marv has another season of competition. He won a major letter last year and this season has been used as a replacement for Harris Andrews at left half.
