Chapter One

"But why can't I use my own name?" The shorter of the two men paused as they neared the elevator. Jim Guthrie, tall, blonde, and deeply tanned, took him by the arm. "Because I say so," he retorted. He pushed his reluctant companion into the car. The door closed and the elevator started its dizzy ascent. "A fine thing," Jim's companion grumbled. "Here I've been away from New York for five years and the first time I come back you make me change my name. What if some of my old buddies meet up with me? What'll they think?" Jim Guthrie puffed his cigarette impatiently. "Listen," he said, "I'm easily changing your name to impress this Kane guy. To him you're going to be Pancho Brownies if it kills you. After we finish up here you can go over to South Brooklyn and be Pete Brown or — or Babe Ruth if you want."

He pointed to a picture on his wall of Madame Della — an imposing looking woman in the armour of "Brunnhilde." "I've seen her picture in the opera house at Buenos Aires," Jim said. "She sang there years ago." Kane shook his head. "She rules Elsa Terry with an iron hand," he said. "She's a combination of the worst features of Gibraltar and Vesuvius." During the following week Jim Guthrie staged a determined campaign to meet Elsa Terry. He bombarded her apartment with flowers, candy, fruit, books and notes asking for an interview. Much to the disgust of Pancho, they attended the opera each night that Elsa sang. But it availed him nothing. All of his presents were returned unopened. "Not that Elsa wasn't intrigued by all this attention. Young and beautiful and thoroughly bored with the sheltered life her aunt insisted that she lead, Elsa spent much time wondering about the man who was trying so desperately to meet her. "Forget about him," the aunt counseled. "He's either a playboy or he's crooked."

"Forget about him. He's either a playboy or he's crooked." (Posed by Grace Moore and Helen Westley)

Jim ignored that one and pushed Pancho from the elevator into the waiting room of William Kane, artists' representative. The walls of the room were decorated with pictures of Kane's clients and the room was filled with several operative agents, for that was Kane's business, managing the business affairs of opera stars. Jim sent in his card and was ushered in immediately to Kane's private office. Kane greeted them pleasantly and showed them to seats. "I received your wireless, Mr. Guthrie," he said. "This is an unfortunate business. "You're putting it mildly," Jim replied with some feeling. "I haven't made the slightest progress with Miss Terry and her aunt," Kane continued. "Progress!" Jim replied. "We already have a signed contract with Miss Terry that calls for her to sing at the opening of our new opera house in Buenos Aires." "But her aunt insists that she must sing in Paris," Kane said. "Obviously she can't sing in Paris and Buenos Aires at the same time. She's not a ventriloquist. "Then we'll sue her," Jim said. "I should think, though, that we could appeal to Miss Terry's sense of decency." Pancho nodded vehemently. "I agree with Mr. Guthrie," he said. Kane sighed. "Yes," he agreed. "If you could get to see her. But she never sees anybody. She's not allowed to." "In any case," Guthrie said firmly. "I will not go back to Buenos Aires without Miss Terry. I induced my friends to sponsor this season of opera and without her it will be a failure. We have a right to insist on the fulfillment of this contract." "I wish I could help you, Guthrie," Kane said. "You're absolutely in the right. But Madame Della is determined her niece will sing in Paris and I'm afraid that settles it." Kane pointed to a picture on his wall of Madame Della — an imposing looking woman in the armour of "Brunnhilde." "I've seen her picture in the opera house at Buenos Aires," Jim said. "She sang there years ago." Kane shook his head. "She rules Elsa Terry with an iron hand," he said. "She's a combination of the worst features of Gibraltar and Vesuvius." During the following week Jim Guthrie staged a determined campaign to meet Elsa Terry. He bombarded her apartment with flowers, candy, fruit, books and notes asking for an interview. Much to the disgust of Pancho, they attended the opera each night that Elsa sang. But it availed him nothing. All of his presents were returned unopened. "Not that Elsa wasn't intrigued by all this attention. Cloidt Family

Return from a
Canadian Trip

Outing Takes Them to Greater Part of the West Dominion and Pacific Northwest.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Cloidt and daughters, Maxine and Frances, returned home Tuesday evening from a trip of some three weeks in western Canada and the Pacific Northwest. They motored direct from here to Calgary, Alberta, Canada and where they spent a short time visiting this thriving provincial city, meeting there many of the residents and gaining a very fine view of the conditions in that section where the crop prospects are very bright for the first time in seven years. They also visited Gleichen and the home that once was owned by Rutherford B. Hayes, and near where is located the ranch owned by the former king, Edward VIII. The greater part of their stay was at Banff, a resort city where in summer seasons the population is from 30,000 to 40,000 but in the winter is around 3,500. Great hotels and resorts make it a choice spot for travelers from all parts of the world and here the baths are operated by the Canadian Pacific railroad. Lake Louise, not far distant, is also world known and in its location makes a spot of unsurpassed beauty. Mr. Cloidt states.

The party then drove to Glacier national park in Montana and found it was well named with the great glaciers of past centuries and wonderful scenic effects make it a rare treat. They also found snow drifts of from nine to ten feet deep and through which roads were cut for passage. They then drove to the northwest to the cities of Spokane and Seattle which are fine modern bustling American cities and where conditions were seemingly excellent. On to Vancouver, the party found the English atmosphere rivaled by the modern American type buildings and found many places of interest to make their time there very pleasant.

They later on their return visited the city of Portland and the Bonneville dam, just recently dedicated by President Roosevelt along the Columbian river. While in that part of the west they also took in the Grand Coulee dam, one of the great pieces of engineering on the west coast.

MARTY-MASTERS NUPTIALS
IN LONG BEACH, SUNDAY

A beautiful wedding ceremony was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Story of Long Beach on Sunday, July 17th, the bride being Mrs. Florence Marty, daughter of Mrs. Leslie Wood of 2309 E. 97th St., and the groom, Mr. Bertis Masters of La Crescenta. They made a very fine looking couple. The bride was a picture of loveliness in a beautiful powder blue gown and the groom wore a gray suit. The bridesmaid, Alta Herrick, also wore a lovely gown of powder blue and the best man, Mr. Mike O'Peitz, wore a gray suit.

The house was decorated with beautiful flowers, artistically arranged. They were pronounced man and wife by Mrs. Neil, the pastor of the Church of God, of Long Beach. Pictures were taken of the bride and groom, after which a splendid luncheon was served. The guests included mother of the bride, Mrs. Wood, and Mr. Leslie Wood; Mrs. Alta Herrick; Mr. Mike O'Peitz; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Story; Mrs. Evelyn Duane; Miss Viola Herrick; Mr. and Mrs. Karl Knetsch; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Motler; Mr. and Mrs. Glen Harris; Mr. Ed Cowder; Miss Bertha Robinson. The newlyweds are on a honeymoon trip to Yosemite and San Francisco, after which they will return to a beautiful home in La Crescenta. —Watts (Cal.) Advertiser-Review.

Volunteers of America Tag Day Saturday

Tags to Be Sold by Local Girls on Saturday, July 25th—Girls to Be Awarded Prizes.

The Volunteers of America have been granted permission by the city administration to conduct a tag day here next Saturday. A representative of the organization has been in Plattsmouth making arrangements for the sale. The occasion is known as "Red Heart Day." Similar events have been held here in previous years. The Volunteers of America was founded many years ago by General and Mrs. Mando Ballington Booth. The representative of the Volunteers announces that this is to be a young people's drive to help children in the state. The tags will be sold by local girls under the direction of Mrs. John Wolf, who will be in charge of headquarters and finances. Headquarters will be at the public library. The following named local people are given by the Volunteers' representative as sponsors for the tag day: Rev. J. C. Lawson, Mrs. E. H. Westcott, Mrs. Wm. Baird, Rev. J. W. Taenzler, Miss C. Olive Jones, Mrs. H. Sylvester.

Awards, Donors
In offering awards to the girls co-operating, who secure the largest amounts for their tags, awards and donors are: First, $200 in cash, given by a friend of the Volunteers; second, $ 1.00 fountain pen, given by Bates Book store; third, $1.00 pair silk hose, Soennichsen department store; fourth, a silver birthstone ring, Crabill jewelry store; fifth, 50c in merchandise, Pease Style shop. Other workers who secure at least $2.50 for their tags will receive a pass to the Cass theater given by Mr. G. G. Griffin.

Girls to Sell Tags
Invitations to help sell the tags have been mailed to a number of girls and the sponsors hope that each one will give at least a portion of her time on Saturday to help the cause. Girls who may not have received a card but who are interested are also invited to participate in the tag day. The tags are to be sold as is customary for whatever amount anyone is willing to give. Purchasers are asked to display their tags to avoid second appeals.

Mrs. Booth and her associates are known for their work in prisons throughout the United States and there have been organized by the Volunteers of America during the past forty years, home for children, the aged, working girls, nurseries, boys' clubs, missions, summer camps and other helpful agencies.

GUESTS AT LOWSON HOME

From Monday's Daily—Mr. and Mrs. W. Lee and Elaine, Jean and Darline of Ithaca, Nebraska were guests yesterday at the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Lawson and family. Elaine stayed to spend the remainder of the week with Miss Florence Lawson and Miss Ruth Lawson returned to spend the week with Jean.

VISIT AT LINCOLN

From Monday's Daily—Mr. and Mrs. Searl Davis and family were in Lincoln yesterday visiting with Mr. Davis' mother, Mrs. Mary M. Davis. They stopped in Weeping Water to visit with Troy Davis on their way back home.

VISITING IN CITY

Mrs. E. T. Hughes of Omaha is in the city to enjoy a visit with her sister, Mrs. W. E. Rosencrans, and other members of the family circle for a few days. Mrs. Hughes was formerly a resident of Gretna.

Used cars, livestock, household goods—all can be sold through inexpensive Journal Want Ads.

HOLD FAMILY PICNIC

The Risings leave for Los Angeles taking with them Mrs. Rising's two sisters, Grace Livingston and Mrs. Myron Wiles. Grace has not been well for several months and it is hoped change of climate will improve her health. On Sunday previous to their leaving, Mrs. B. W. Livingston gave a dinner for the family in picnic form, each member bringing a covered dish and ate on the spacious lawn beside their open fireplace. Those present were J. S. Vallery, Margaret Ann, Robert, Mr. and Mrs. Rising, Myron Wiles and wife, Hugo Heyn and wife, Eugene James and Mary Marjorie, Mrs. Lillian Livingston, John Benton and Dickie, Henry Hild, wife and Gary, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Livingston and Tommy, Mr. and Mrs. Towner Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Vallery and Larry, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Ptak and Denny, Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Livingston and Grace, Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Hild of Murray.

All enjoyed themselves visiting and had the usual good time at their gathering at the old home. There were four big birthday cakes as it was a month of birthdays for four of the party, Mrs. B. W. Livingston, J. D. Rising, J. S. Vallery and Mrs. Henry Hild.

FINDS HISTORIC LETTER

W. P. Cook, who first made his home in Plattsmouth over fifty-five years ago, was looking over some of his papers which had lain in a trunk at his home in this city and ran across a letter he had received when he was a barber in Hastings in 1893, forty-five years ago.

This letter was received from his friend then and also his friend through the years and is his friend and neighbor at this time, Will J. Streight. At that time the improved bicycle had just come in and was very popular. Lee Allison, who will be remembered by the older citizens as a farmer who always kept a very sporty team of driving horses, Mr. Allison with his team and the late T. M. Patterson, who was a rider of a bicycle ran some races on the country roads as well as at the fair grounds as the county fair was held here then. Mr. Will Streight had written W. P. Cook asking if any fast bicycle riders resided in Hastings as a race between the Allison team and a bicycle was desired. No race was arranged however between Mr. Allison and a rider from Hastings.
