YOUNG 'SAMSON' IN 1900 NEARLY AS STRONG NOW

MINNEAPOLIS (UP)—Michael Frech, now 66, who was hailed nearly 40 years ago as the "Samson" of the University of Minnesota, still scoffs at the suggestion that he take things easy. "My ancestors lived to be 100," Frech said, "and I don't think I'll spoil that record."

In 1900, Dr. L. J. Cook of the physical training department of the University of Minnesota conducted a country-wide survey to compare the strength of students at other schools with that of students at other schools. It seemed as though every school uncovered a "strong man," with the exception of Minnesota, until Frech walked into the gymnasium and asked for a tryout.

Frech broke all strength records ever made at the university. At the time he was a law student. Today he is president of the Minnesota Federation of Township and Municipal Officers, Inc., and has traveled 1,500,000 miles in his occupation as an engineer.

A recent strength test showed his powerful muscles nearly as strong as in his youth.
