

Neighborhood News.

Weeping Water Engle. Chas. Joyce has almost completed his 80 car contract for ice to an Omaha firm, but he will continue in that line of business as long as there is any money in it.

Wm Jones of Plattsmouth was here Monday looking up some good horse flesh. We cannot charge him with county seat affairs this trip, for they have that all cut and dried down at Plattsmouth now.

Rev. Worrel of Dunbar, fell from the train as it was coming into the station last Friday. He saw the conductor drop off at the dispatcher's office, he thought he could do the same, but discovered his mistake when he alighted on his head. He will wait for the train to stop in the future.

A man advertised last week that he would buy horses. He simply made a mistake in the wording of the bill. It should have read: "Wanted! a lot of horses donated." These fellows come along and offer about the half of what an animal is worth, hoping to catch some poor fellow in a pinch that has got to sell.

Mell Hele's was captured and taken prisoner by the U. S. R. boy Saturday night, and made to ride the goat that he says has been fed on tin cans since the war. As Mr. H. was a member of the gallant 1st regiment of Maine cavalry for four years, he was not much averse to being made a prisoner of war by the remnant of the Union brigade located here.

Horace Strickland, of Wabash returned from his visit to his old home in Indiana last week. He does not paint a very bright picture of the affairs in that part of the country. He evidently has lost his old love for the east and has given it to the west. Neither the land or the weather here suits him now, preferring to live in a land of sunshine to one of perpetual gloom, and where land is rising in value instead of depreciating.

A Facetious View of It.

EDITOR JOURNAL:—Let me mention a few candid reasons why Plattsmouth and not Weeping Water should be the county seat. In the first place the river that runs by Weeping Water has its head and mouth too near together, they are both in the same county. Again that river is not large enough to furnish teams to shed over the county seat, and onions are scarce. The river that runs by Plattsmouth has its hundred heads in a hundred different mountains, running over more than half the globe, and empties into the polar seas, for the Gulf stream that runs between Florida and Cuba, and then north to the Arctic ocean is only a continuation of the Missouri river. The most of the water in the Gulf of Mexico comes from the Missouri river, and that river runs by Plattsmouth. Then again the B. & M. bridge which holds Nebraska and Iowa together ought to be near the county seat. There is no knowing how far these two states might pull apart if that bridge was at Weeping Water. If Plattsmouth should toss Weeping Water into the sky, then she would be up the spout, and if she should fall on top of Louisville then the latter would be down the spout. "Evil communications spoil good manners." When a young man of Weeping Water kisses a girl he puts his moustache in the girl's mouth. That would not be allowed in Plattsmouth in the day time.

Moving Back to Cass.

J. C. Eikenberry has bought the movables of Eli Samson, keeper of the poor farm and will move there soon and take charge of the county poor. This arrangement was made after an understanding had been arrived at with the county commissioners. A year ago Mr. Eikenberry left Cass county and went into the stock commission business at South Omaha, but this was not a paying venture, and he again comes back to this county—taking the place he left when he became deputy. The many friends of Mr. Eikenberry will be glad of his return. Mr. Samson will move to his home—the old Fairfield property—in this city and expects to keep on helping to build up Plattsmouth.

To the Hon. F. E. White—Greeting: Well done, good and faithful servant.—Citizens of Cass.

That New Petition.

Some good people in Cass county who are foolish enough to allow their prejudices to get away with their better judgment, imagine a wrong has been done to Louisville by the rejection of the petition for a new county seat election. When such men—men who have the best of motives and intentions—will reflect, however, on the fact that the county attorney, who is certainly not prejudiced in favor of Plattsmouth, was asked by the board for his opinion of the validity of the petition, declared that the whole petition was defective—that no part of the petition was in strict compliance with the law—such men must realize that no fair man could complain that the board rejected the petition, not on the general ground laid down by the county attorney, but for specific and stated reasons, and particular cases of non-compliance with the law. "I understand," said a member of the bar Thursday, "that a petition is in circulation for a special election. Let the Louisville people go ahead. I am surprised however, that they did not stand by their late petition. They claimed that it was legal and all right, and filed a notice of appeal. That showed their faith, but by getting out a new petition they acknowledge that their other one was defective, and acknowledge that the board was right in rejecting it. Their pretended indignation at unfair treatment has suddenly oozed out at their finger ends, and they have no right to complain at officers who conscientiously perform their duty. I think they will find it more difficult to get names this time when the railway graders are all gone from the county than they did before."
