OFFICIAL COUNTY NEWSPAPER.

The most sensational bill passed by Congressman Breckinridge during his career as a statesman was that fatal $10 bill.

The only living ex-president of the United States is Benjamin Harrison. But cheer up! There will be another ex-president pretty soon.

A SAN FRANCISCO architect has drawn $40,000 in a foreign lottery, according to reports. If they be true it is one of the greatest architectural drawings on record.

A NEW YORK lawyer has secured a verdict of $1,000 against a railroad company for the loss of eight teeth. When a man can get a full set for $8, this looks unreasonable.

TOM REED'S reason for opposing the tariff bill is that a low tariff will promote manufacturing in the west. And tariffite newspapers expect a republican rival among western farmers.

JERRY SIMPSON declares that the United States senate should be abolished. The members of that body no doubt believe that Jerry Simpson should be abolished. This is reciprocity.

The Illinois township elections have gone republican in spite of a net gain of three cents a bushel in the price of wheat. The American people are very hard to please, even under a single gold standard.

The saloonkeepers of Iowa are also displeased with the mulct tax law. It seems that Governor Jackson had a much better opportunity to popularize by a veto than Mr. Cleveland has had during his present term.

CAPITAL CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON, D. C. April 4, 1894.—Wall street has no use for silver money, and it has succeeded in impressing its views on the president very completely, and he has indicated, in vetoing the Bland seigniorage bill, that he would agree to permit no further coinage unless a bill was passed authorizing the issue of $25,000,000 or more in gold bonds—a bill, it is safe to say, which will never be passed.

That veto, by the way, is the last straw that permits a united democratic party in the future while Mr. Cleveland is president. Ever since he was inaugurated he has been building up a factional wing of the party, composed of the gold worshippers, just as Buchanan did during his term as president, resulting in the breaking in two of the party in 1860. This result seems to be inevitable from the present situation. The refusal of Mr. Cleveland to call congress together last spring to act upon the tariff, as demanded by the party through the press; his subsequent call of the extra session after his friends, the Wall street bankers, had brought on the panic, demanding the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman law as the shibboleth of administration favor; his making the approval of his course on the money question the only avenue through which patronage would be dispensed, and finally, his veto of the seigniorage bill, which had received the approval of more than three-fourths of the democratic vote in both houses of congress—all these things point inevitably to one result—that the party, to maintain its avowed position, must part company with the president and his bagatelle of gold-bug satellites from the east. Whether this division will become a fixed fact throughout the west and south this year simply depends upon the courage and independence of the democracy in those sections. But that it is coming no one gifted with political foresight can question. The vote today in the house on reconsidering the vote on the vetoed Bland bill shows that the eastern democrats have joined hands with the eastern republicans in obeying the dictates of Wall street, while a few western republicans joined the western democrats in sustaining that measure.

The vote stood 144 to 115—not enough to pass the bill over the veto.

Last week the house suddenly found itself threatened with the necessity of electing a new speaker, but the danger was a very brief one. The governor of Georgia had offered the vacant senatorship, occasioned by the death of Senator Colquitt, to Mr. Crisp, but it only took that clear-headed gentleman a day to make up his mind not to accept it. Meantime, however, the tongue of gossip was wagging in a lively manner as to the election of a successor. Messrs. McMillan, Hatch, Springer, Bland and Bryan were all talked of as possibilities—with the chances most favorable to the first-named, because of his long service. Mr. Bryan told his friends that he was not a candidate, and united with others in asking Mr. Crisp to decline the proffered promotion—for the good of the party in the house. It was fortunate that Mr. Crisp saw his duty so plainly; otherwise a bitter contest might have ensued.

At last, after seven weeks of delay, the debate on the tariff bill was begun in the senate Monday—Senator Voorhees opening with a two-hours' speech, carefully prepared, in defense of the bill. Senator Allison followed, continuing over for an hour and a half today; and the fact was developed that it is the republican program to delay action as much as possible. Senator Mills then made a ringing speech of an hour on the ad valorem feature of the bill as opposed to the specific duties of the McKinley bill. His ringing voice and eloquent utterances was in strange contrast with the humdrum methods of senators generally, and aroused the galleries to a high pitch of enthusiasm. The man who can sit in the senate galleries and listen to the dull platitudes of a senatorial debate, as a rule, is very easily satisfied. He can hardly appreciate what it is to be bored.

It would be a godsend to the American people were the constitution so amended as to permit the people to elect their senators by a direct vote. The superannuated old fogies who libel the spirit of American institutions by occupying seats on that floor would soon give place to younger and more active men, in accord with modern thought and modern progress.

Present appearances indicate that two months or more will be consumed by a useless and tiresome debate on the tariff bill, and then a half month more will be lost by conference debates and maneuvers before the measure will go to the president. We shall see.

TRUE DEMOCRACY UNDISMAYED.

The following from the Dubuque Herald gives evidence that soon the western democratic clans will be gathering in force and the tariff reform slogan will fill the air with its notes until bill and gien will echo the sounds back again, stirring the hearts of the people and bringing them together for another effort to secure that equality before the law so essential to the promotion of the interests of the government collectively and individually. Read from the Herald of the 6th inst. and note the clear, distinct sound of the slogan:

"The weak-kneed democratic senators of New York, New Jersey and the east may fear to make changes in the tariff as demanded by the Chicago platform, but the western democrats have no such trembling. The key note sounded by the speeches at the annual banquet of the democratic Iroquois club in Chicago the other night was very defiant in its demands for the carrying out of the platform promises for tariff reductions. The western democracy in its vigor is retreating not a foot in its tariff reform fight. The Iroquois club is an intellectual body of democrats and well speaks for this region. The whole tone of the speeches was in favor of radical tariff reform and even sounded free trade. As one speaker well said: 'No man is guaranteed liberty and the pursuit of happiness while there is 65 per cent or 47 per cent, or any other per cent of duties taken from him for the nourishment of his neighbor.'"

WILLIAM LAIDLAW, the young man whom Millionaire Russell Sage used as an improvised bomb-proof when a crank attempted to dynamite him some months ago, has been awarded $25,000 damages by a New York court. The penurious Mr. Sage is doubtless sadly reflecting that it would have been cheaper to settle with the dynamiter in the first place.

SENATORS BY DIRECT VOTE.

Chicago Times.

Representative Bryan of Nebraska is continuing his good fight for the passage of his bill securing to states the right to choose senators by popular vote, if they so desire. It is a fight for true democracy, and there seems to be every indication that it will be a winning fight. The purposes of the bill have been briefly outlined in the Times and the desirability of its passage is generally unquestioned. It is Representative Bryan's idea, as well as the idea of every right-thinking citizen, that United States senators should be chosen by a direct vote of the people, rather than in legislative assemblage, wherein corrupt practices may find play. He seeks through this bill to avoid the expensive and aggravating institution known as a legislative deadlock, and desires that every legal voter be permitted to express his senatorial preferences at first hand, and not through the proxy of a handful of men who too often betray the trust reposed in them by their constituents, whom they are morally bound to serve. The measure is a wise one and should certainly find favor in congress as it does with the people. Already it is before the committee on the election of president, vice-president and representatives in congress, and it is expected that this body will reach a decision in the case at its next meeting. This decision will be favorable if the desires of the democratic masses are heeded. Every state is anxiously awaiting relief in the matter.

OKLAHOMA, which was thrown open to boomers a little more than a year ago, already claims a population of 250,000, which is larger than Delaware, North Dakota, Wyoming, Montana, Arizona, Nevada or New Mexico. It has more territory than any one of the twelve states already in the union. Its property has an assessed valuation of $13,951,056, and increase of over $7,000,000 in the past two years. It is a splendid agricultural region. In the past year the farmers harvested 284,254 acres of corn, 222,319 acres of wheat, 109,374 acres of oats, 21,311 acres of cotton, 18,755 acres of sorghum, 14,121 acres of Hungarian millet and 4,423 acres of broom corn.

The Louisville Courier-Journal defines a mugwump as a man too mean to be a democrat and not bad enough to be a good republican.
