What has been done towards securing the privilege of the B. & M. of using its old track to Happy Hollow as a road to the free ferry? A month ago it was the general understanding that the road over that route was a certainty.

The Adelpian quartette was booked for a concert at Louisville last week, but cancelled their engagement because the members refused to pay the license levied by the town board. The sympathy of the audience was with the quartette, and some warm speeches were made.

The names of Messrs. E. R. Todd, Wm. Neville and W. H. Cushing, of this city, have been placed on the list from which the grand jury will be selected for the next term of United States court at Omaha, and P. E. Ruffner and H. Guy Livingston will have a chance to be drawn on the petit jury.

Some thirty members of the local Turnverein society loaded themselves into carriages and carriages Sunday afternoon and journeyed down to a grove near the ferry road, where they enjoyed themselves in turning and other athletics for several hours. The afternoon was a highly enjoyable one throughout.

The South Omaha Tribune is booming Matt Gering as the democratic candidate for governor. Matt will hardly be a candidate for the nomination, but the fact nevertheless remains that if South Omaha had its full say, Matt would be made nothing less than president, the governorship in that town being really considered as beneath Matt's calling.

The JOURNAL is informed by several members of the school board that the cut in the salaries of teachers was ordered simply as a matter of necessity. The finances have been running so low of late that a deficit is a certainty, even on the basis fixed by the cut. The members of the board are unanimous in the assertion that just as soon as the treasury will permit, the salaries will be raised to the old figures.

Councilman Chas. Grimes returned home Thursday morning from St. Louis, where he had been in attendance at the national convention of chiefs of police. He reports having a good time, and while in St. Louis he met a gentlemen named Hopkins, who was formerly a resident in this vicinity, and who taught school here in 1859. Mr. Hopkins inquired regarding some of his old acquaintances here, among them being John D. Tutt and Uncle Jacob Vallery.

Friday was the sixtieth birthday anniversary of Landford J. M. Woodson, of the Cottage house, and sometime during the day somebody—supposedly a tramp—celebrated Jim's natal anniversary by entering his house and swiping his gold-bowed spectacles. The "specs" were valued at $8, and Jim will probably give half that amount to get his hands on the man who took them, and we'll bet that he will cause the fellow to think that he is the "hustkiest" sixty-year-old man that lives in this part of Nebraska.

The Louisville Courier-Journal says: Like the Ashland club, the Plattsmouth boys have a large number of admirers, and they all came along to see the massacre. Even that ever-thoughtful and kind-hearted soul, C. H. Parmele, brought his Sunday school class of a dozen or more pretty girls, just to induce the boys to do their best—and they did it, for every time a ball came in reach when Plattsmouth was at the bat, it was sure to go tearing through the air to the tune of a two or three "bagger."

The Kelly army, which started down the Des Moines river the other day from the city of Des Moines, is making rapid progress, but the men are nevertheless finding it a more difficult matter to secure provisions than was anticipated. At the towns of Dunreath and Bed Rock, which are close together, when the army had its meal Friday the people at first absolutely refused to sell a thing. Kelly hunted up a deputy sheriff and flatly informed him that if the army could not purchase food it would take it by force. The deputy consulted with citizens and finally concluded that it would be wiser to sell the supplies needed, for the army was numerous enough to have captured both towns.

The fifth annual meeting of the grand chapter, P. E. O., of Nebraska, concluded its session at Hastings last Friday. The report presented by the committee on chapters showed a total membership in the eleven chapters in the state of 244. Mrs. Jennie Bryant of Omaha was re-elected president; Mrs. Clara A. Crawford, first vice-president; Mrs. Katie Dutton, Hastings, second vice-president and chaplain; Mrs. Carrie McNaughton, Superior, recording secretary; Mrs. Houseworth, Plattsmouth, treasurer. Wave Allen's Latest.

Lincoln News: "Wave Allen, who is something of an eccentric genius, and has worked several ingenious patents, has gone after big game. He has nearly completed designs for a frightful implement of war that will prove an unmitigated terror to belligerents if it fulfills his ardent expectations. It takes the form of a war engine and is operated by steam. It travels on four wheels and when ready for business can be headed toward the enemy's camp and left to do its bloody work with the full assurance that no call for retreat will ever cause it to turn back. As it goes it will throw into the enemy's ranks torpedoes that will explode at the proper moment and tear everything loose in that vicinity. It will carry and discharge several hundred of these torpedoes as it moves toward the enemy, and to prevent the possibility of capture by the enemy it will blow itself up as soon as its mission is accomplished. The moment of its explosion can be timed to suit the distance it will have to travel, and it is so constructed that any effort to stop its forward progress will cause it to explode. The torpedoes that it throws are also a special invention of Mr. Allen, and can be charged with powder, dynamite and other explosives. They can be made at remarkably small cost, as can also the machine or war engine, as the inventor calls it. The invention which he applies to the torpedo, he says, can also be applied to vaults and safes in banking houses and so regulated that they will be perfectly safe for the man who understands them, but certain death to the man who undertakes to cultivate an unauthorized acquaintance with them. The principle can also be applied to any small chest or box or valise in which one wishes to carry valuables, and so regulated that no one stands any show of being injured unless some novice undertakes to open the thing.

Mr. Allen is quite sanguine that he will meet with favor from the authorities of warlike nations as soon as its merits are explained to them, and expects to make an effort soon to secure the aid of capital in the development of his invention. He says it will not require a great deal of capital, and he expects to secure it in Nebraska."
