The much talked of inventory of the nation's resources is now practically completed. To consider the material it has brought together the national conservation commission has just announced its first full meeting for Tuesday, December 1, in Washington. At that meeting the first steps will be taken toward putting into tangible shape the results of the six months' hard work on taking stock for the country's waters, forests, lands and minerals. One week later, after the commission has gone over the inventory, it will hold a joint meeting in Washington with the governors of the states and territories, or their representatives. At this meeting the inventory will be further discussed and the report which the president had requested the commission to make to him by January 1, will be formulated.

An Associated Press dispatch, under date of New York, November 13, says: "Much interest was occasioned here today by the publication of a report that James Stillman, president of the National City bank, popularly known as the 'Standard Oil bank,' is controlling owner of the Outlook, of which President Roosevelt is to become a 'contributing editor' when he retires from office. Officers of the Outlook company refuse to make public the name of any of the owners of its $150,000 capital stock. The published report credited Mr. Stillman with owning 1,000 of the total issue of 1,500 shares. 'The company is not a public service corporation,' was the reply of William B. Howland, treasurer and one of the directors of the Outlook company, when he was questioned regarding the authenticity. 'It is under no obligations to give the names of its stockholders or other particulars regarding its affairs. It is a private business, but the names of its directors may be found in the manuals, and the name of Mr. Stillman is not one of them. We can give no information regarding the identity or holdings of a single stockholder.' Mr. Howland said there had been no recent change in the control of the Outlook company. Mr. Stillman is at present in Paris. Later, however, Mr. Howland issued a formal statement in which he declared that Mr. Stillman has owned less than 10 per cent of the stock of the Outlook company for nearly thirty years. The remainder of the stock of the company, he said, is owned by those engaged in the active management of the company." When this was brought to the notice of President Roosevelt he issued the following statement from the White House: "The president has not the slightest concern with the question as to who are the stockholders of the Outlook. His concern is with the general policy of the paper, which is and has been consistently admirable in every respect. The president will be responsible only for what he himself writes, and his probable future attitude must be judged by his action in the past."

A Nashville, Tenn., dispatch carried by the Associated Press follows: "Former Senator Edward Ward Carmack, editor of the Tennessean, was shot and killed this afternoon about 4 o'clock on Seventh avenue north, in front of the Polk flats, by Robin Cooper, a son of Colonel Duncan B. Cooper. Mr. Carmack was going north on Seventh avenue in front of the flats and Colonel Cooper and his son, Robin, were approaching Seventh avenue on Union street. Soon after they came in sight of one another and the shooting began, Robin Cooper, it is said, firing two shots and Senator Carmack one. Colonel Duncan B. Cooper, it is said, drew his pistol, but did fire. Senator Carmack fell to the ground nearly instantly. Robin Cooper was shot in the right shoulder, but was not badly hurt. It is understood that the trouble is one of the results of the democratic gubernatorial primary in which Carmack was defeated. Carmack had, since he became editor of the Tennessean, been quite caustic in criticising what he called the democratic machine, and had printed several editorials about Colonel Cooper. Within the past few days, it is asserted, Colonel Cooper notified Carmack that these editorial criticisms must cease. This morning another editorial in reference to the colonel appeared in the paper and this is supposed to have been the immediate cause of the tragedy. As Senator Carmack fell at the edge of the street, Colonel Duncan Cooper put his arm around Robin Cooper and both walked a few feet down Seventeenth avenue to Dr. R. G. Fort's office, where the slight wound in Robin's shoulder was examined and treated. An ambulance carried the body of Mr. Carmack to an undertaking establishment. The pistol of Carmack, a 32-caliber, was lying at his side, with two of the chambers empty when the body was picked up and was turned over to an officer. The stump of a cigar Mr. Carmack had been smoking was also on the street beside him. Young Cooper was carried to a hospital and Colonel Cooper was held at police headquarters. He has made no statement. Robin Cooper is a practicing attorney at law, 27 years old, and single."

Edward M. Morgan, postmaster of New York, was shot by an insane man but not seriously wounded. His assailant committed suicide.

SILVER DOLLAR DOOMED

Treasury officials note that silver dollars are gradually going out of use in the west and south, and that their place is being taken by dollar bills. A few years ago it was a rare thing to see a dollar bill west of the Mississippi river, while in the south silver dollars were far more plentiful than the soft money. It seems that the doom of the silver dollar was sounded when the government decided that it would no longer pay the freight between subtreasuries and banks on the coins.—Savannah (Ga.) News.
