and Consumption. Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of manking, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and mover to care the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a re-lieble protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectively reasely that one be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against saiddent attacks of Crossa, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to coice and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.
