Fifty-eight Degrees below Zero.

During the past winter a party of persons have been upon the summit of Mount Washington taking notes of the temperature. They had a small house erected which was lined upon the ceiling, sides and floor with two thicknesses of heavy felting. When the weather was sufficiently warm they ventured out of doors. On Friday night, February 3d, they enjoyed a lively gale. They say: "It was one of those gales that keep us wide awake when it might be more agreeable to sleep. On Saturday morning it was quite cool, 20° below zero, and after a day of intense cold, the thermometer at 7 p. m., settled to 45° below zero, the wind blowing hard all the time. In such an atmosphere it would not take many minutes for a person to be numbered among the things that were. When the record was 45° below zero, we thought the bottom had been touched, but the mercury continued to fall until 3 o'clock, Sunday morning, when it was fifty-eight degrees below zero."

Cod Liver Oil.

In every country on the earth there are to be found sufferers whose chief reliance against the ravages of damp and cold air is is found in the oil from the codfish liver (jecus aselli). It is not, therefore, surprising that the single port of St. John, Newfoundland, exported last year nearly 350 tons of this invaluable medicine. The declared value of this quantity is about $110,000. The oil is dissolved from the livers by gentle heat, in a tin vessel placed in boiling water, and filtered twice. The last filtration is made through heavy woolen cloth, and takes from the oil nearly all its odor and color, leaving in it all the iodine to which, in combination with its carbon, its alternative, fattening, and heat-creating properties are due. It is not only in consumption, but in scrofulous affections and diseases wasting the tissues, that its value is felt. The sickly infants of poor mothers, whose atrophy, from bad and insufficient food, commences even before their birth, can be nursed into health and plumpness by its aid. From its first introduction to the world in the year 1832, the use of it has been steadily on the increase; and the recent annual report of one of the largest of the London hospitals shows that 70 per cent. of the patients of all classes are largely benefitted by its use. It was first introduced into medicine by Dr. Percival.

Living Epistles.

Christians are living epistles to be read. The world reads them every day. How important that this living gospel, which walks and trades, and stirs about in public places, should be correctly printed! Yet how many of these living epistles have been printed from battered type, from mixed fonts, on spotted paper, and in dim ink. But, after all, orthodoxy is safer in the consecrated heart, than in the theological library. Evangelism is an upright, open-eyed warm handed, advancing thing, not the flat flimsiness of a mere programme, to be written and put away on the shelf for safe keeping; it is always alive, alert and growing; it is not dead Latin, but vital mother tongue in this country; is not steepled to church, cadenced in ritual, or robed at the altar, so much as hearted in living people, and radiated in work day duties.

Our Witness of Immortality.

Dr. Hall says: "The popular impression is that ordinary men live wholly or mainly in the present. If the present, as distinguished from the eternal, be meant, it is true. But it is not true that most men live in the present as contrasted with the nearer future. On the contrary, the person is little in most minds, but as a step to the future. The child longs for boyhood, and the boy for manhood. Manhood longs for the time of establishment, and when it is reached—if it be—the time of rest and relief from care. So the human spirit, by its projecting of itself into the future, appears in some vague way to own its present unsatisfactory condition, and to 'feel after, if happily it may find' something better in advance. It would be strange if this life-long habit of counting on the future were to be broken abruptly off after death, and end in nothing. It is the witness without ourselves of our immortality."

Passions for Display.

The world is crazy for show. There is not one person in a thousand who dares fall back on nothing but his real, simple self for power to get through the world, and extract enjoyment as he goes along. There is too much living in the eyes of other people. There is no end to the aping, the mimicry, the false airs, and the superficial arts. It requires rare courage, we admit, to live up to one's enlightened convictions in these times. Unless you consent to join in general cheat, you are jostled out of reach.—There is no room for you among the great mob of pretenders. If a man dares to live within his means, and is resolute in his purpose not to appear more than he really is, let him be applauded. There is something fresh and rare in such an example.

A Thought for Parents.

Never for one day forget that the first book children read, nay, that which they continue to read, and by far the most influential, is that of their parents' example and daily deportment. If this should be disregarded by you, or even forgotten, then be not surprised when you find another way—to your sorrow and vexation, and the interruption of your business, if not the loss of all your domestic happiness and peace—that your children only "know the right path, but still follow the wrong."

A Mother's Influence.

A man finds he cannot make his way in the world without honesty and industry, so that, although his father's example may do much, he has to depend upon his own exertions; he must work, he must must be honest, or he cannot attain to any enviable rank. But the tender soothings of a mother, her sympathy, her devotedness, her forgetting temper—all this sinks deep in a child's heart; and let him wander ever so wide, let him err, or let him lead a life of virtue, the remembrance of all this comes like a holy calm over his heart, and he then weeps that he has offended her, or he rejoices that he has listened to her disinterested and gentle admonition.

A gentleman living in the Fourth District, renowned for charity, says no beggar can go away from his gates unsatisfied; they can always "get a bite." He keeps a dog tied loose.

A clergyman in New York, a few days since, explained that "science must stop, or religion cannot go on." The New York Advertiser suggests that he stop, and allow some wiser teacher to occupy the pulpit.

Mr. Bergh has done great good in stopping much of the cruelty that human brutes inflict on their dumb namesakes; but isn't he going too far in taking rats under his protection? How about mosquitoes?

The worst fooled thief on record is a Mississippi chap, who, the other day, stole the heaviest carpet-bag he could find in the depot, and, after carrying it five miles, opened it and found the contents to be a half hundred of bibles.

Texas celebrated her "silver wedding" February 16. She had then been twenty-five years admitted into the Union.

About six thousand women have so far signed the memorials to Congress, asking that suffrage should not be extended to their sex.

A tough old widower in response to a neighbor who addressed words of comfort to him, replied: "Wall, yes, I shall miss her—she was a very expensive woman."

In New Haven the police arrest every boy between the ages of six and sixteen who is found in the streets during school hours, and cannot "rise to explain."

The venerable wife of a celebrated physician in Boston one day observed her husband in the funeral procession of one of his patients, at which she exclaimed: "I do wish my husband would keep away from such processions; it appears too much like a tailor carrying home his own work."

"Be solemn," said Mr. Corwin, "if you want to succeed. The world looks up at the ringmaster and down on the clown. It despises the man who entertains it. Be as solemn, therefore, as an ass. All the monuments have been built to solemn asses."

A German in Richmond, Ind., spoke in his native tongue to a French lady, who, not understanding, thought his remarks insulting and went for him with a club. He buys his arnica by the barrel.

A correspondent of the New York Standard, who says he is a middle-aged married man, and not given to "gush," is quite positive that American women are becoming more and more beautiful every year. This is not an unnatural conclusion. They certainly dress more becomingly than formerly, and now at length the absurd idea that a pipe-stem waist is beautiful is being given up, and gentility no longer demands disfigurement. We may expect, therefore, more health, as well as more beauty, in the other sex, which is, of course, infinitely more important.

Down in Pennsylvania there is a Presbyterian clergyman whose nominal salary is four hundred and fifty dollars a year. But as it was six months in arrears, the congregation determined to give him a donation party to help along. It came off—the party did. The entire flock was on hand, but of the presents there were only six rolling pins, a pen wiper, and a quarter of a peck of dried apples, crop of 1864. The minister, of course, had to furnish refreshments; and the company not only discoursed four hams, three and a half pounds of sixty cent butter, and thirteen loaves of bread, but they ate up two pounds of sugar and all the next winter's supply of preserves.—To crown all, four spoons were missing. The clergyman says he wants to have just one more party, and then he will close up business and begin life over as champion pauper at the alms house.—He is particularly down on one sister who crammed herself full of ham and preserves, and enough succulent diet to keep the whole family for a week, and then laid up against the wall pretending to feel religious, and singing, "There's rest for the weary."

Buckle, in his History of Civilization, says great men are not born, but made. In connection with which the Louisville Courier says: "All the men we have now at the head of affairs were born—And it is a great pity they were, too."

A colony of ex-soldiers is forming at Davis, Stevenson county, Ill., for the purpose of locating in one of the Western Territories, and securing lands according to the laws relating to soldiers' homesteads.

A few weeks ago a dentist arrived in Warrenton, Va., and advertised that he would "remove all of a person's teeth for $2, and insert a new set for $10, besides giving six months' credit." He was busy for two weeks pulling teeth, and at the end of that time half the people in the town had empty gums. But while the people were waiting for the dentist to fit them with new sets, the abandoned scoundrel eloped with the hotel keeper's wife; and now there are two or three thousand people in Warrenton who can not eat anything tougher than soup and farine.

A near-sighted Indianapolitan went to see his girl and fell on his knees to propose in due form. A No. 10 boot awakened him to consciousness that it was the old man, who had his wife's apron on and was pealing potatoes, before whom he knelt.

A money-hunter being about to marry a fortune, a friend asked him how long the honeymoon would last. "Don't tell me of the honeymoon," he replied: "It is the harvest moon with me."

The first iron vessel built in England was a canal barge, seventy five feet long, six feet three and a half inches wide, built of five-sixteenth inch plates, at Birmingham, in 1787. The first iron ship that went to sea was the Aaron Manly, built near Birmingham, and put together in London in 1829.

One of the last illustrations in the Paris Charivari, signed, "Cham," represents a crowd of Prussians carrying away in their hands on their backs, and in their baskets all the clocks in France; and Cham remarks: "They may carry off all the clocks, but they will not prevent the hour of vengeance from striking."

The extraordinary power it possesses in immediately releiving, and eventually curing, the most obstinate cases of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Catarrh, hoarseness, Asthma and Consumption is almost incredible. So prompt is the relief and certain its effects in all the above cases, or any affection of the throat and lungs, that thousands of physicians are daily prescribing it, and one and all say that it is the most healing and expectorating medicine known. One dose always affords relief, and in most cases one bottle effects a cure. Sold by druggists, in large bottles, Price One Dollar. It is your own fault if you still cough and suffer. The Balsam will cure.
