Dr. Renner will we believe, have let this one question write the editorials, and telegraph blind their interest in others of more importance. Not that intemperance is not an evil, or that temperance is not a great moral reform; but it is a question that can not effect the general interest of the Government. Political parties are founded for certain purposes, and for the advancement of certain principles; and they are supposed to, and do legislate for need a Western man there, and above the interest of those principles to the sacrifice of all others.

The issue of the third party is Prohibition, and in legislating and making prohibition laws, what will become of the questions of finance, commerce, tariff, Railroads, and other question of vital interest to our nation?

The Republican party was founded upon the fundamental principles of Liberty and Prosperity; and to the advancement of these questions, in all their intricate leanings it bends its powers; and with what success, is a
